Congress Overrides Antistrike Bill Veto

20,000 More Miners Walk Out, More Blast Furnaces Close

Yanks Pound Reich; R.A.F. Drops 1500 Tons on Ruhr

American Targets Undisclosed; British Blast Wuppertal; Refugees Jam Roads

By the Associated Press

London, June 25.—Fleets of United States heavy bombers pounded northwestern Germany today on the heels of another R. A. F. town-crusher attack last night upon the Ruhr, the bomb-shattered industrial valley where four million to five million were reported evacuated to escape the mighty Allied air offensive.

The big American bombers hammered undisclosed targets in adverse weather against strong fighter opposition, and lost 18 ships for a total of 173 Allied bombers as the cost of more than six days and nights of tremendous attacks. Thirty-eight were American and 135 British.

Flying Fortresses made up at least part of the raiding force, and Fortresses from one station alone destroyed 24 enemy fighters and probably 14 more. This group lost six bombers.

Crewmen said today's attack was made in the worst weather and against the fiercest fighter opposition they had encountered in six raids. The Germans, they said, sent 200 fighters against them.

Airfield Attacked

R. A. F. typhoon bombers joined in today's activities, attacking an airfield at Caen, France, without loss.

The daylight assault followed the R. A. F.'s renewed attack with perhaps 1500 tons of bombs upon Wuppertal in the Ruhr. Bombs were concentrated upon Elberfeld in the western section of the amalgamated city, with its chemical and textile targets.

In Bern, Switzerland, a reliable source declared that the Ruhr raids had forced the Germans to move four to five million nonessential workers and citizens to safer areas, with the "vast enterprise" still under way. Zurich's Die Tat asserted that the battle for the Ruhr "appears approaching a climax."

Picturing the devastation at Elberfeld, a German radio broadcast declared that "even now smoke and flames are rising.

U. S. Sub R-12 Sunk In Training Accident

The Navy announced last night that the United States submarine R-12 recently was lost off the East Coast with an undisclosed number of officers and men. While the R-12 had a normal complement of 28 men, the Navy indicated some of those aboard had escaped.

The submarine was engaged in training exercises when she went down.

"A number of officers and men were unable to escape from the vessel before it sank," the Navy announcement said. "The depth of water makes it impossible to salvage the submarine and hope has been abandoned for recovery of the bodies of the missing personnel. The next of kin have been informed.

"Information obtained from survivors indicates that the loss was probably due to accident and not enemy action, and an investigation is now in progress to determine the available facts of the case.

"Announcement of this incident was withheld until attempts to locate and raise the R-12 were discontinued, in order that enemy submarines might not be given information that would enable them to attack the salvage vessels."

The R-12, commissioned in 1919, had a displacement of 530 tons afloat or 680 tons submerged. She was 179 feet long with a beam of 17 feet 6 inches. Her armament included one 3-inch 50-caliber gun and four torpedo tubes.

The previous submarines lost since the war began, included six overdue and presumably lost due to enemy action. These were the Arberjack, Argonaut, Grampus, Grunnion, Perch and Shark.

In addition, the submarine Sealion was destroyed to prevent capture in the Philippines, and the submarine S-26 was sunk in January, 1942, in a collision off Panama.

The names of the R-12's officers and men were not disclosed.

Tanker Torpedoed

Charleston, S. C., June 25 (AP).—Ensign John S. Arnald of Tallahasse, Fla., drew praise from survivors of a torpedoed tanker for getting his gun crew in action despite severe burns from the fire which the torpedo started.

Fifteen survivors of the 70 men aboard the tanker were landed here. One of them was Edward S. Graves, 253 Kentucky Avenue Southeast, Washington, D. C.

Other survivors said that Arnald, with his hands, body and face already blistered, ran through flames to reach the forward gun mount and direct his men to train their sights on the spot where the submarine was expected to surface.

The entire 15 were picked up the next day after a patrol plane had sighted them and sent aid.

'A' Gas Book Suspension May Be Next

OPA Says Action Would Be Taken Only as a Last Resort, However

The OPA is considering suspending all A-coupon gasoline ration books on the East Coast, in order to insure gas for essential civilian use, it was revealed last night. However, this would be done only as the last resort, officials assured.

At the same time Petroleum Administrator for War revealed that he had allocated 328,000 barrels a day of gasoline to civilians in the East through July, August and September.

He said his order, which is interpreted as sounding the death knell on any hopes for an easing of restrictions, was made necessary because of heavy and increasing military demands.

Ickes Still Has Hopes

The allotment is 2000 barrels a day greater than was allotted during June, but the increase will go only a short way towards easing present stringent rationing.

Ickes said that due to present efforts to increase the movement of oil to the East he "fervently hoped to be able to ease restrictions sooner or later."

The Office of Price Administration had asked the oil administrator to make the allotments on a quarterly instead of a monthly basis as it was believed it would work less hardship.

More grief for motorists was contained in a hint from a spokesman for OPA that seasonal demands on gasoline from farmers and commercial users were expected to result in a still greater reduction in the supply available for the ordinary motorist.

7400 Barrels Daily for Farming

Ickes, in issuing his order, froze 7400 barrels a day for use of farm equipment, in order to guarantee the Nation's food supply.

It was revealed that commercial trucks use 140,000 barrels a day, leaving a maximum of 180,600 barrels a day for passenger car use.

Exact needs of passenger car users are not known, but recently Ickes said that passenger car drivers were using considerably more than the quantity allotted to them, and the result was to drain reserves.

In reference to the plan to suspend A coupons, an OPA spokesman said the coupons already had been slashed as far as possible and the value of the C and B tickets reduced, so the only other step would have to be the suspension of the A's.

WLB and Ickes Still in Dispute On Terms of U. S. Operation of Mines

By Ben W. Gilbert
Post Staff Writer

About half the country's coal miners remained away from work yesterday as 20,000 additional miners quit in protest against the Government's failure to pay full recognition to the union's "surrender" terms.

President Roosevelt told a press conference that he did not recognize the October 31 deadline set by U. M. W. Chief John L. Lewis when he ordered the miners back to work, thereby exciting the miners.

Some miners also objected that Government operation has been only a sham up to date—indicating that the miners expect full and complete Government operation. Lewis specified that the miners would continue to work only as long as the mines remain in Government hands.

Terms Still in Dispute

Meanwhile, four more steel blast furnaces were closed down because of a shortgae of coal, bringing to 14 the number down in the Pittsburgh area.

The terms under which the Government should operate the mines remained a matter of sharp dispute between the War Labor Board and Secretary of Interior Harold L. Ickes, Government operator of the mines.

Seven members of WLB paid a visit to War Mobilization Director James F. Byrnes yesterday morning and asked him to inform President Roosevelt the board requested the taking of steps to (1) make it clear to the American people that the coal operators will not suffer under Government operation, but that their economic interests will be protected fully, and (2) get a clearcut answer from Lewis whether he intends to obey the order of the board to sign a contract with the coal operators.

Ickes Talks With Operators

Board members made it clear that they believe the President must punish the United Mine Workers, if they remain defiant, with all the power at the Government's command.

WLB members suggested no course of action, but it was indicated that they favored depriving the union of its automatic dues checkoff and sequestering its more than seven-million-dollar treasury. Such action, it was pointed out, would greatly impair the union.

Outstanding Provisions Of New Antistrike Law

Highlights of the antistrike bill enacted into law yesterday by Senate and House over President Roosevelt's veto:

Prohibits any strike in a Government-held plant. For instigating or aiding such a strike the act imposes fines up to $5000 or a maximum one-year jail sentence.

Requires 30-day notice of strike in a private war plant and a secret strike ballot. If workers then strike, the Government can take over and criminal penalties will operate against any further strike.

Gives the War Labor Board power of subpena and clear statutory powers.

Authorizes the President specifically to take over strike-bound plants, a power he already has been exercising as Commander-in-Chief.

Prohibits political contributions by labor unions in any election for Federal office.

Carries a "sleeper" provision interpreted by some conferees as banning further maintenance of membership orders by the WLB.

Swift and Decisive

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

By overwhelming majorities of both Houses of Congress, the Connally-Smith antistrike bill last night became the law of the land over the veto of President Roosevelt.

Only two hours after the President had vetoed the penalty-studded measure as provocative of more strikes in war industries, Congress had overridden his objections and written the bill into statute. The President issued his veto message at 3:13 p. m., the Senate voted at 3:30 and the House at 5:28.

The swift House and Senate rebuff was the only overrider of a presidential veto during any war, and the first time in this Administration that Congress had not hesitated at least a day before legislating over the President's head.

Senate Votes 56 to 25

The Senate's roll call count to repass the measure was 56 to 25; the vote in the House was 244 to 108.

In the Senate there were only two brief speeches, and in the House, only two. Following a bipartisan leadership conference in the House Speaker Rayburn simply put the question on the bill, "the objection of the President to the contrary notwithstanding."

Senate leaders, who originally supported the antistrike measure after what they considered reliable assurance that the President would sign it, joined sponsors of the bill in the lightning overrider. In the House, the leadership, divided, Majority Leader McCormack supporting the veto, Majority Whip Ramspeck voting for the bill.

Twenty-seven Republicans teamed with 29 Democrats in the Senate for the bill, while 19 Democrats, 5 Republicans and 1 Progressive voted "No".

House Leaders Surprised

The Senate overrider was expected, but the House action surprised even its leaders. On original passage the House (219 to 129) vote had fallen shy of two-thirds. Yesterday 25 more members voted for it. Many of the bill's opponents from the New York Tammany delegation and Pennsylvania urban districts were absent.

The House vote cut completely across party lines, 114 Democrats and 130 Republicans upsetting the veto. Only 67 Democrats, 37 Republicans and four minor party members voted to sustain it.

Since high noon members had been awaiting the President's decision. At his morning press conference Mr. Roosevelt promised action before midnight, but still declined to say what that action would be. Senate sponsors of the bill sensed a veto, and machinery was set in motion for an immediate vote.

When the message came, Senator Connally (Democrat) of Texas, chief Senate author of the bill, took the floor to say that in his opinion the American people and the men in the armed forces would be "sorely disappointed" with the veto.

The big, flowing-maned Texan,

2 Solid Weeks Of 90° Heat Equals Record

Mercury Climbs To 94; Still No Relief in Sight

An all-time record of 14 consecutive days of 90-degree temperature was equaled here yesterday as the mercury climbed to 94 and within 1 degree of the hottest day of the year.

At the same time, the Weather Bureau held out the prospect of no relief from the heat today, forecasting that the mercury would soar to 95, for the third time this year. Should the forecast be accurate, or in the event the temperture goes to 90, it will break all records for continuous heat in the history of the local bureau.

Two persons were taken to Freedmen's Hospital suffering from heat prostration. They were Annie Mae Cunningham, 79, Negro, of 1331 Third Street Northwest, and William Ross, 42, of 1116 T Street Northwest, an ice-truck driver. Neither was reported in serious condition.

Excessive heat forced the closing of the District Building at 3:30 and sending all employes home. In addition several of the ration boards closed early, with the one located at Ketchum School shutting its doors at 2 p. m.

Yesterday the mercury reached 94 degrees at 3:50 and then began to drop slowly. The lowest yesterday was 75, recorded at 6 a. m.

Once before this month has 94-degree heat been recorded, June 17, and twice it hit 95, on June 4 and 13.

Due to censorship regulations the Weather Bureau is not allowed to give a forecast any longer than 24 hours ahead. So, there was no way of ascertaining when the present heat wave would be broken.

D. C. Gunner Shoots Down Nazi Plane

By the Associated Press

A United States Bomber Station in England, June 25.—Sweeping through the worst weather and the fiercest enemy opposition yet encountered, the Flying Fortress Sky Wolf fought off German fighters continually for 50 minutes today, and at least one was shot down by Staff Sergt. Adolph Lurig, 28, of 825 Marietta Place Northwest, Washington, D. C., tail gunner.

LURIG

Lieut. Robert P. Paulin of Steubenville, Ohio, pilot, said that cannon shells blasted big holes in the plane's tail section, and that one shot missed Lurig by a few inches. Undaunted, Lurig kept pouring bullets out of his gun, and got a good burst into one Focke-Wulf interceptor, which was seen to explode in midair, Paulin related.

The action took place in an attack on northwest Germany which cost this station six bombers, but the Nazis paid dearly. Fortresses from here alone shot down 24 German fighters—seven destroyed by one Fortress alone.

Paulin related how gunfire knocked out all of the oxygen system except the lines feeding the pilot's compartment.

"Just by chance we had taken along eight extra emergency "walk around" bottles of oxygen today," he said, "and the rest of the crew

Corn, Livestock Men Strike Against U. S., Laborites Charge

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

Labor leaders yesterday charged corn farmers and livestock dealers with "striking against the Government" by withholding food from the market, and served notice that demands for general wage increases would be made by their groups if prices of food were not rolled back and brought under control by July 15.

Philip Murray, president of C. I. O., declared at a mass meeting called by the Congressional Committee for the Protection of the Consumer, that "extortionate profits" have been made in the food industries since war began.

Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York joined with Murray and A. F. of L. speakers at the meeting by urging the use of subsidies to keep consumer prices down, but he disagreed in the food profit angle. Retailers and wholesalers, he declared, are not able to operate under OPA ceilings without the use of subsidies.

Advises "Talking Sense"

"Many of these men are actually suffering out of pocket losses to stay in business," he declared, outlining several methods by which OPA ceilings could be violated and declaring violations would continue until a "drastic change" was made in the present food program.

LaGuardia told Congressmen staging the meeting, effects of which were supposed to spread over the country and help in keeping OPA intact as well as building up support for subsidies, they

President Opposes Plan for Naming Of Food 'Czar'

For the second time in a week, the House yesterday cracked down on the Administration's food subsidy program, while the Senate posed to take similar action.

Without even so much as a record vote, the House approved the Wolcott amendment to the Commodity Credit Corporation loan bill, forbidding use of funds by any Federal agency for a rollback of food prices or any other purely consumer subsidy.

In the Senate, the Administration was fighting a last ditch battle to defeat an even more drastic amendment by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, terminating price act authority for subsidies, except for transportation and strategic materials.

The food subsidy revolt, supported by an active farm organization lobby, continued its headlong course in the face of a White House warning that responsibility for inflation will rest 100 per cent with the legislature, if Congress takes the path to higher prices.

President Roosevelt slapped out for the second time at congressional proposals for a food "czar," approved Thursday by the House Agriculture Committee. As at a previous press conference when he defended food subsidies, he said the question is whether we are for inflation or against it.

House adoption of the Wolcott anti-subsidy rider to the CCC bill reinforced House action last week slashing funds of the OPA and cutting off salaries of any OPA official who participates in a subsidy program.

Representative Wolcott (Republican) of Michigan who drew the latest comprehensive subsidy ban, interpreted it thus:

"It prevents the Treasury Department from paying the grocery bills of 132,000,000 people."

Under terms of the rider, the roll back on coffee, butter and meats would be specifically terminated, as would any other subsidy on agricultural products paid solely to reduce or maintain prices.

One modification was added to a floor amendment, permitting continuance of subsidies to food canners, but only for the present crop year.

Validity Dates Announced For Red Stamps Series

OPA yesterday announced validity dates for four new series of red stamps, which may be used for purchases of rationed meats, fats, oils and cheese through July 31.

Famous throughout the music capitals of the world for his virtuosity, Spalding has always inspired tremendous ovations from his audiences for the warmth and charm of his personality.

The complex system of lighting and acoustics has been completed to give music-lovers in Meridian Hill Park a maximum of pure sound and clear transmission.

The roomsized canvas shell in which the musicians will sit has been carefully waterproofed, its steel frame checked for proper resistance to the cool breezes which fill the park each evening.

Arrangements have been made with the National Capital Parks Service to accommodate the hundreds of listeners who are unable to obtain tickets for this concert. Standing room around the fountain-filled lagoon, near which the audience will be seated, will be available.

Good seats still are available, however, at the Cappel Concert Bureau, in Ballard's, 1340 G Street Northwest. The response has been excellent, according to C. C. Passage of Strike Bill Gives WLB Power to Summon Lewis

Passage of the Connally-Smith antistrike bill over the President's veto gave the War Labor Board the power of subpena which may well be used to force John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, to appear before the board and explain his refusal to obey the board's order to sign a contract with the coal operators.

It was also regarded as possibly providing the basis for criminal action against the leaders of any groups of coal miners failing to report to work Monday morning.

Lewis refused to answer WLB summons at 'l stages in its consideration of the coal mine wage case, thus providing the groundwork for his later defiance of the board's order. Tuesday, he refused to sign the board-ordered contract but directed his men to return to work for the Government until October 31. Half the country's miners disobeyed his order yesterday.

Other implications of the newly enacted measure which were being studied by members of the War Labor Board included the following:

1. Will the labor members remain on the board? Some officials seemed to think so in spite of previous statements by labor leaders that provisions of the bill made it impossible for labor representation to continue. The other alternative—substitution of an all-public board for the present tripartite public, labor and management board—was viewed as unacceptable to labor.

2. Will the board continue to refer cases of defiance to the President? Some observers believed that enactment of the antistrike measure placed an obligation on the board to exhaust the sanctions thus received, including subpena

Carmen Beach Found Guilty Of Transporting 'Party Girls'

Washington's sensational white slave trial was terminated yesterday when an all-male jury found Carmen Beach Martin guilty of violating the Mann Act in transporting women into the District for immoral purposes.

The 90-pound Spanish-born rhumba dancer sobbed when Justice Matthew F. McGuire in District Court refused her counsel's plea that she be permitted to remain on the $10,000 bond until an appeal could be entered.

Defense Attorney Harry Whelan based his request on the fact that the bond was sufficient to insure the woman's appearance in court for her sentence, which is scheduled for Thursday, and also that she needed time to close her apartment. After the former reason was dismissed by the court he requested a day's delay in remanding the woman to jail, stating that her husband, Chief Pharmacist's Mate Edward Earl Martin, was on a three-week trip for the Navy.

"I see no reason," Judge McGuire said, "to upset the precedence of this court in remanding people to jail who have been convicted of a felony. On one occasion, not long ago, I allowed a young woman who was convicted of bigamy to be sent to Gallinger Hospital on the grounds that she was pregnant.

"She returned the court's kindness by escaping from the hospital. In this case the defendant will be remanded to jail for sentence."

A United States marshal who was standing in back of the Martin woman immediately ushered her from the courtroom for transportation to the District Jail. Mrs. Martin, upon hearing the verdict

Big Nazi Air Base In Greece Raided

Invasion Fear

Nazis Mass 150,000 at Brenner Pass

By James M. Long
Associated Press Staff Writer

London, June 25.—The Germans were reported unofficially tonight to be massing about 10 divisions of up to 150,000 men in northern Italy to guard the Brenner Pass, southern portal to Germany, against invasion, while the Berlin radio itself said the famous British Eighth Army had been sent to Syria to spearhead an Allied attack from there.

The German troop movement was reported by an unofficial source with close continental connections, and it was suggested that the Nazis were concerned over the possibility that Italy might collapse in event of an Allied landing.

This source, who cannot be identified, said about five divisions were taking up new positions, below the Pass, and the remainder would form a mobile troop reservoir that could be sped to the Riviera or southeast into the Balkans in case of emergency.

Except for the German air force and special service forces, virtually all the other Nazi troop strength was reported already pulled back from the crisis zones—Sicily, the toe of Italy, and Sardinia.

Transfer of the Eighth Army, flushed by its victories in Libya and Tunisia, to Syria was reported by a German military commentator in a broadcast recorded by Reuters. The report was wholly unconfirmed and it was recalled that King George VI visited the Eighth Army last week in Tripoli. The Allies have long been building powerful armies in the Middle East, where the Ninth and Tenth Armies are stationed.

Some London observers attached particular significance to the surprise raid by United States Liberators yesterday upon the Nazi airbase at Sedes, 6 miles southeast of Salonika. The most likely reason for raids in this area would be to knock out bases from which German planes might operate against any Allied amphibious operation aimed at the Dodecanese and other stepping stones to Greece, it was said.

The Vichy radio said in a broadcast by Reuters that "there are signs that an Allied attack on the Balkans is imminent . . . The Luftwaffe has been strongly reinforced in the Mediterranean in the last few days."

At Trondheim, Norway, an unidentified German admiral believed to be Admiral Otto Ciliax, Nazi naval commander in chief in Norway, told 2000 marines that he believed the Allies would invade Norway "within a short time," according to Stockholm dispatches.

The return of King George VI recalled the widespread reaction of Londoners at the time of his trip: That he did not go to praise an army for its victory, but to cheer troops on the threshold of a new onslaught.

300 U. S. Planes Blast Sardinia In Heavy Attack

George Tucker.
Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, June 25.—American Liberator bombers have violently raided the big German airdrome of Sedes near Salonika, a major air base in the Nazi's "Siegfried Line" in Greece, and found surprisingly weak antiaircraft defenses.

United States air headquarters here announced today that more than 50 Liberators dropped well over 125 tons of bombs at Sedes yesterday without a single loss. It was the first American blow at German-held Greece since September.

"Direct hits were scored on three hangars and all are believed to have been destroyed," said a Ninth United States Air Force communique.

"Dispersal areas were covered by bursts and at least three enemy aircraft were seen to be destroyed. Administrative buildings northeast of the hangars received hits and several strings of bombs crisscrossed the field itself.

Posters Dropped

"No enemy fighting opposition was encountered.

"All our aircraft returned safely."

Not bombs and fire alone, but hundreds of thousands of posters were dropped over several cities with encouraging messages for the Greek people.

Caught Unaware

At Sedes, the Liberators apparently caught the Nazis wholly by surprise. The big bombers went over in two waves.

The established nature of the German base was indicated by the report of returning pilots that its six hangars—three of which were believed to have been wholly destroyed along with other great damage all over the airdrome—were of heavy stone constructions.

Salonika itself is Greece's second largest city and, because of its fine harbor, has been used by the Nazis as a principal supply base for the Mediterranean theater.

(Salonika, historic in itself, was the scene of one of the great turns in the last World War. It was at that city that Allied troops massed in the late summer of 1918 to drive north into the Vardar and Struma Valleys to a quick defeat of the Bulgarian army. Bulgaria's collapse in turn was followed by a collapse of the German position in the whole of southeast Europe.)

Italian Isle Battered

Allied Headquarters in North Africa, June 25 (AP).—More than 300 American bombers and fighters sweeping out from bases of the Northwest African Air Force sprayed the big Italian island of Sardinia yesterday from its air fields to its harbors and cut deeply again into the Axis fighter strength in this theater.

General Eisenhower's headquarters announced today that in these widespread attacks, a heavy assault upon the important port of Catania in Sicily the night before by British Wellington bombers and other operations 21 enemy planes had been shot from the skies at the loss of nine Allied craft.

many miles, distant streams of bomber-out people can be met . . . It is with great pain that they move forward either carrying or pushing on barrows the few belongings still left to them.

"Tired to Death"

"Every single street is full of rubble . . . People are tired to death. They lie on the grass. Many of them were injured."

Apparently in a desperate move to save the remains of the Ruhr, the Germans were reported by the Air Ministry to have pushed their outer ring of defenses to the North Sea coast.

British crews said coastal defenses were "obviously strengthened" but that they met with "a far more intense struggle in the Ruhr itself." There, huge belts of searchlights and guns were pressed into action last night and one pilot said he counted nine cones of 30 to 40 searchlights each.

The R. A. F. reported many night fighters out, and the American raiders today encountered fierce attacks by swarms of German defenders, diving on the U. S. bombers in relays. Today the Germans were benefitted also by bad weather, which made observation of the target difficult, Eighth Air Force headquarters said.

The Germans again tried to knock out the American raiders by flying above and dropping bombs on them.

Second Big Daylight Attack

It was the second big daylight attack this week for the American heavies. On Tuesday they smashed the synthetic rubber factory at Huls in the Ruhr, losing 20 Fortresses.

Last night's R. A. F. attack made Wuppertal "like a blast furnace when the coals have been raked evenly over the floor," one Canadian pilot said. Smoke rose at least 10,000 feet.

An air ministry communique declared the attack was "nearly as heavy as that recently made upon Barmen, the eastern half of Wuppertal," when a saturation raid on May 29 with 1500 tons or more of bombs was said to have virtually wiped out that industrial section.

"From preliminary reports, great damage appears to have been done," the air ministry declared.

The Germans acknowledged heavy losses to the population and their communique said several towns were hit, "in particular Wuppertal-Elberfeld and Remscheid," the latter near Wuppertal and a center of the German tool industry.

Wuppertal, a city of more than 400,000, was formed in 1929 by joining Elberfeld and Barmen.

Elberfeld is the home of the I. G. Farbenindustrie chemical works, the Jaeger plants, manufacturing roller bearings, and numerous textile factories. Remscheid is the site of important railway repair shops.

A Berlin broadcast identified other towns struck as Solingen, Neuss and Muchen-Gladbach, but said attacks there and at Remscheid "were made to all appearances as a means of diverting attention." It also admitted "considerable damage" and casualties.

Soviets Repel Kalinin Front Counterattacks

By the Associated Press.

London (Saturday), June 26.—A resumption of local but bitter fighting on the Kalinin Front northwest of Moscow, in which the Germans were hurled from a stilement and three times beaten off as they counterattacked, was reported early today by the Soviet command, along with sharp air activity in several areas.

Near Kalinin, said the midnight Soviet communique recorded here by the Soviet monitor, 600 Nazi troops were killed and 6 enemy mortars and 2 wireless stations were captured, along with other material.

Soviet scouting was reported on the front west of Moscow, where Russian infantry and artillery fire destroyed about a company of Germans and silenced several Nazi mortar and artilley batteries.

Aloft, announcements both by the Soviet command and the Moscow radio told of destruction of six German planes in the south—in the Lisichansk sector and west of Rostov—and of heavy Russian raids on Nazi airdromes and railway junctions at Orsha and Karachev, in which "a large number" of German planes were destroyed.

Orsha is about 250 miles northwest of Orel, and Karachev is behind the Orel Front, where for weeks there has been intermittent activity suggesting the preparation of major action by one side or another.

The German radio said the Red army had resumed a local offensive southwest of Velikie Luki and that bitter hand-to-hand fighting developed.

The broadcast, which covered purported action for the second day on the central front about which the Russians have made no official reference, was recorded by Reuters.

Record Air Blows to Blast Italy, Newsman Says

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 25.—A prediction that American and British airmen will give Italy "a hammering such as no country has ever received before" came today from Edward Kennedy, veteran Associated Press foreign correspondent, after a tour of war coverage unparalleled in the Middle Eastern and North African theaters.

Kennedy, sun-tanned, lean and hardened, holds a record as the only newspaperman who covered the Middle Eastern and North African wars from the time the first shot was fired by Italy in 1940 until the last German surrendered in Tunisia. He gave his views on returning on his first vacation since before the war.

"Conditions are perfect for giving the Italians a terrific pasting from the air," he said. "The skies are so blue, with few clouds and no fog, that the amazing American bomb sight is operating with uncanny accuracy. Distances are short, enemy resistance is light and Allied casualties are comparatively few. The United Statese Air Forces already have done a job of bombing that has been unequaled in this war.

"In my opinion, the African campaign was not a second front. It was a first front, for it kept the Mediterranean open, exposed the Axis' Achilles heel—Italy—to attack, and established a shelf of aggression 2500 miles long from which a death blow can be launched at the Axis. A large, well-trained force is ready and they have terrific supplies."

Then he discussed equipment, saying:

"It was in Spain that I first saw the German 88-mm. gun. The Nazis used the Spanish War as a testing ground for this weapon, improving it markedly. And up until nine months ago it was the best gun in Africa.

"The German 88-mm. was the main reason behind all of the British reverses in Africa. It could outrange the British guns, and they made the error of trying to throw tank against tank—a sort of 'Charge of the Light Brigade'—while the Germans smashed them from distances they couldn't reach.

"The American 90-mm. and 155-mm. guns changed all this. It was the 155's which pounded Mateur to pieces from 10 to 12 miles away, and really opened the gateway for the final American drive."

King Returns To Britain After Tour of Africa

Algiers, June 25 (AP).—King George VI has returned to England from North Africa after nearly two weeks spent in offering personal congratulations to the fighting men who wiped this continent clean of Axis power.

He visited the armed forces of the United States, Great Britain and France, flying or driving to scores of their encampments in and around Oran, Algiers, Tunis, Cap Bon and Tripoli. His journey covered more than 3000 miles of territory that only a little over a month ago was held by the Axis.

It was the longest trip through a theater of war any sovereign within living memory ever took. On several occasions the King slept in field tents and ate army food in the middle of the desert. He was badly sunburned after the first few days.

Six Yanks Hurt as Troops, Army Police Clash in England

London, June 25.—Five United States enlisted men and one officer were reported today to have been injured in a fight between military police and Negro troops in northwest England last night.

A statement issued by headquarters of the United States Army in the European theater of operations said early reports indicated that "the fight began when military policemen remonstrated with Negro soldiers behaving in a disorderly manner" in a town street.

"The situation was never out of control, it was stated by the local commander," headquarters said.

It reported that one of the Negroes was wounded seriously.

"One man, Pvt. William Grosslands, colored, of Gibson, N. C., was stated to be seriously injured," the statement said.

"The officer is First Lieut. David D. Ousset. His injuries were not considered serious. The other enlisted men were not badly hurt."

Lieutenant Ousset, who is from San Antonio, Tex., is white, as are the military police involved.

No Probe in Detroit Riots

Detroit, June 25 (AP).—Gov. Harry F. Kelly said today no grand jury investigation was planned into the race rioting Monday that brought Federal troops to restore order on Detroit streets.

The Governor accepted a recommendation of his fact-finding committee of four law enforcement officials that such an inquiry was not needed.

"You cannot start a grand jury on hysteria," said one of the committeemen.

The first two jury trials resulting from riot cases ended today with convictions of a Negro and a white man on charges of disturbing the peace. Both juries were composed entirely of whites. The two men immediately were sentenced to 90 days in jail.

Mayor Edward J. Jeffries, commenting on plans of Representative Martin Dies (Democrat) Texas, for his House Committee on un-American activities to make an inquiry here, said today that "the Dies Committee can offer us nothing but more confusion."

Jeffries said, "the FBI has been investigating, along with military and Naval intelligence, and city and State police. Another investigation by Dies would accomplish nothing at all."

Sen. Walsh's Brother Dies

Leominster, Mass., June 25 (AP). James W. Walsh, 80, a brother of United States Senator David I. Walsh (Democrat) of Massachusetts and a former postmaster here, died last night at his home. He leaves a son, James, jr., who is city solicitor, and four sisters, Mrs. Nellie Dooley of Boston and the Misses Mary, Hannah and Julia of Clinton.

Conferees Approve D. C. Fund Increase

Bad Timing

Japs Struck Too Late, Says Grew

By the Associated Press

Buffalo, N. Y., June 25.—Japan attacked the United States and Britain too late, former Ambassador James C. Grew said here tonight, and the reason for this fatal error in timing was the unexpectedly stiff resistance of China.

In an address for delivery under the auspices of the Office of Civilian Defense, Grew recalled that Americans for a while were so impressed by this Chinese resistance to Japanese aggression that they over estimated its effectiveness and imagined Japan bogged down and bled white in a futile struggle to conquer 400 million people.

After Pearl Harbor and Singapore, opinion swung to the opposite extreme and there was a tendency to assume that "China's efforts had been in vain, and that Japan was stronger than ever."

Actually, Grew asserted, what happened was that China's stubborn defense weakened the momentum of Japan's military machine to an extent that "the Japanese started their wider aggression too late for it to have even the slightest hope of ultimate success."

"They know," he said, "that we can take their navy, demobilize their army, control their industry, limit their trade, strip their fortifications, and even occupy part of their country without disturbing their war-making capacity if we fail to stamp out the tradition of militarism. The innermost heart of Japanese aggression is the Japanese militarist cult, and Japanese claims to racial superiority. Unless that cult is destroyed, another war will be inevitable, and the Japanese will begin preparing their next military empire at the very moment that they raise the white flag over the smoking ruins of this one."

$55,500,000 Budget Ready for House Action Monday

House and Senate conferees late yesterday agreed on the $55,500,000 District budget for 1944. The conferees retained most of the Senate amendments increasing District funds, particularly for child welfare here.

The House is expected to vote Monday on the conferee-approved measure.

Among Senate amendments retained by conferees are:

1. Provision to retain the Housekeeping Aide project for another year, with an appropriation of $38,745 for a staff of 30 to assist in cases of household emergency. The service was placed in the hands of the District Health Department.

2. Authorization for the expenditure of $82,000 for a new National Training School for Girls in Prince Georges County, Md.

3. Authorization of expenditure of $15,000 on repairs to the present girls' training school, so so that it can be used for the Industrial Home School, whose Wisconsin Avenue site is needed by the Navy.

4. The conferees accepted the Senate's creation of a new $4600 supervisory job in the District Water Department, but knocked out a Senate-proposed increase for the present water registrar, who will become first assistant under this bill. They also rejected a proposed raise for the second assistant, and directed the District Commissioners to make a full and independent investigation of the water system, following a scorching report by Comptroller General Warren charging that the department was losing thousands of dollars annually.

5. Conferees retained the $79,358 Senate provision to operate 14 recreational areas developed from Lanham Act funds.

6. They kept in the measure also an appropriation of $12,000 to allow the Commissioners to coordinate ambulance facilities here.

7. Both houses were in agreement from the beginning in providing funds for a people's counsel, should the President appoint one, and conferees yesterday agreed on provision of $2000 for clerical help for that office.

Five Senate amendments offered from the floor, including one to continue penny milk, one creating a child guidance clinic for the Juvenile Court and one creating pupil guidance teachers for junior high and elementary schools could not be adopted by House conferees until the amendments had been reported to the House. It was indicated, however, that there would be no real disagreement on these issues.

The Senate conferees yielded to the House in giving up a plan to engage 40 clerks to assist teachers in local schools. The Senate had voted to appropriate $57,600 for this purpose.

Conferees also tossed out the Senate provision to continue the motor vehicle parking agency for which, an appropriation of $2500, plus $8000 in unexpended funds, had been allowed.

Army Flies Boy to N. Y. For Operation

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—A nonstop flight from Miami in a four-engined Air Transport Command cargo plane, authorized expressly by the commanding general of the Army Air Forces, brought a 16-year-old boy to New York today for a life-or-death operation on his almost severed spinal cord.

A portion of the plane's cabin was converted into a temporary hospital where the boy, Irving Goldfarb, was placed along with a large cargo of war material and military personnel. The ship's regular schedule was not interrupted, the Army said.

It arrived at LaGuardia Field at 9 a. m. (E. W. T.) and young Goldfarb, injured by an accidental shotgun blast, was taken immediately by ambulance to Jewish Hospital, Brooklyn, for an operation.

The arrangement with the Army was made after the boy's parents tried without success to charter a plane for the trip and appealed to Air Forces Gen. Henry H. Arnold and Maj. Gen. Harold L. George, commanding the Air Transport Command.

Marine Hero of Guadalcanal To Get Congressional Medal

Second Lieut. Mitchell Paige of the Marines, who manned machine guns when all of the men in his command were killed or wounded on Guadalcanal and then led reinforcements in a bayonet charge against the Japanese, is getting a Congressional Medal of Honor.

Paige, of Dravosburg, Pa., was a platoon sergeant at the time, commanding a section of machine guns during a heavy attack by the Japanese last October.

The Navy, telling today of the award of the country's highest decoration, said:

"The enemy succeeded in breaking through the American lines directly in front of his position, and, in the charge, killed or wounded all the men in his command.

"Left alone, Paige immediately manned the guns of his section and, when they were put out of action, secured another from a nearby unit and returned to his position under heavy fire. Single-handed he repelled the enemy charge until reinforcements arrived, when he led the newly arrived troops in a bayonet charge which forced the Japanese back and restored the battle line."

Doctor Uses Magnet to Draw Lock From Boy's Stomach

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—In what doctors said was the first such operation on record, a Brooklyn physician yesterday fished out a metal lock from the stomach of a 5-year-old boy by means of a magnet.

The patient, Donald Brown of Brooklyn, swallowed the inch-long lock 13 days ago.

His parents consulted Dr. Samuel Silber who set out in search for an electro-magnet small enough to be inserted into the stomach.

At an armature maintenance shop, he was told it was impossible to make a magnet small enough, or to magnetize a rod with enough strength to attract and hold the oblong-shaped lock.

He then visited M. L. Beyer, plant superintendent of the International Postal Supply Co., who communicated the problem to the General Electric Co.

Two days ago, Roy C. Muir, vice president of the company, flew in from Schenectady with a piece of highly magnetized compressed metal processed by General Electric. Beyer grooved the magnet to fit on the end of an ordinary stomach tube.

Dr. Silber, after experimenting with the gadget, lowered the tube through the mouth of the conscious and cooperative boy yesterday at Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn.

He established contact, and coaxed the lock past the protective cardia in the upper part of the stomach into the esophagus from which Dr. Carl Kaplan, nose and throat specialist at the hospital, seized the lock's hasp with an instrument and pulled it out.

Carmen Beach Found Guilty In Vice Case

Had Joked With Reporters

While the jury was out for two hours deliberating the degree of her guilt Mrs. Martin joked with reporters and told them she was unworried about the outcome. Apparently the verdict came as a distinct shock to her.

Under the law she is liable to a sentence of from 20 months to 5 years and a fine of $5000 or both.

Members of the Diplomatic Corps of the Latin-American embassies and others were said by Assistant United States Attorney Bernard Margolius to have been among the woman's clients. He charged, during the trial, that she employed girls of Latin extraction to fill dates in prominent Washington hotels with her favored customers.

On consent of the prosecution the names of her customers were not brought into the testimony although she admitted that she had entertained Ambassadors and diplomatic attaches at her apartment at 1322 Fifteenth Street Northwest.

During the four-day trial the packed courtroom listened attentively to the sordid testimony which indicated that Mrs. Martin had utilized the services of admitted prostitutes for her South American colony trade.

In charging the jury Justice McGuire specifically told them that to transport a woman within the boundaries of the District for immoral purposes was definitely a violation of the Mann Act and that if they believed the Martin woman to be guilty of the offense they should find her guilty.

Seek New Trial

Defense Attorney Whelan indicated that he would immediately appeal for a new trial.

The Carmen Beach Martin trial was the latest in a series of vice prosecutions which, according to the United States attorney's office, resulted in sending the most notorious white slaver of the East to prison for 10 years and a guilty plea from another person indicted on the same charge.

Last week Judge McGuire sentenced Anna May Swift, 59, to serve 10 years in prison for operating a white slave ring in a fashionable establishment in Chevy Chase, Md. Her sentence terminated a 20-year career in the vice racket.

Assistant United States Attorney John W. Fihelly told The Post yesterday that George Francis Whitehead would be sentenced next week for transporting women from New York to the District for immoral purposes. It was indicated that a woman indicted with him, who is charged with operating his sumptious establishment at 2701 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, would also plead guilty.

Whitehead pleaded guilty to all counts of his indictment. Mildred Powell Carter, 39, Negro, is expected to enter her plea this week. Seven women were mentioned in one indictment after they were arrested in the raid which involved Mildred Carter and Whitehead.

Both the Swift and Whitehead establishments were operating under the guise of "massage parlors" and advertised extensively as being reputable institutes. The Whitehead establishment was known as the Hopkins Institute.

House Votes To Abolish Subsidy Plan

increasing production, subsidies on feed wheat after prices reached parity and subsidies on vegetable oils and fats. None of these are involved in the Administration's program to ease the increasing price burden on consumers with fixed incomes.

Passed by Voice Vote

The amendment passed by a voice vote while the House rushed to complete action on the CCC bill in time to vote on the President's veto message. Clipped from one billion dollars to a half-billion, was the added loan authority asked by the CCC.

After several false starts toward a vote on the Clark subsidy repealer, the Senate reached an agreement to ballot today at 1 p. m. Early in the day the Senate accepted a modification of the Clark proposal by Senator George (Democrat) of Georgia. This would permit subsidized transportation of fuel oil, gas and coal to the East to continue, and likewise sustain subsidized production of strategical war materials, such as copper.

Senate debate opened with an angry attack on Secretary of Commerce Jones by Senator Clark (Democrat) of Missouri for allegedly lobbying against the Clark amendment. Clark's ire was aroused by a letter Jones sent Senator Johnson (Democrat) of Colorado. Jones' letter said RFC commitments already had been made for payment of 450 million dollars in meat, butter and coffee subsidies, and asked that these commitments be fulfilled.

Clark charged that Jones "was here yesterday sitting in the lobby trying to create doubts in the minds of Senators."

"Indecent Lobbying"

"This is an act of indecent lobbying," declared the Missouri Democrat. "This is a practice which is forbidden by law. Jesse Jones in all fairness could be impeached by the House, and if he were impeached I would vote to convict him."

Acting Senate Majority Leader Lister Hill jumped to Jones' defense. Hill said Secretary Jones was well within his rights in coming to the Capitol to interview Senators, that Jones himself had to be more cooperative with Congress than other Federal officials.

As for the letter to Senator Johnson, he said it embodied information Jones believed the Senate should have, and if he had not written it "he might even have been derelict in his duty as Secretary of Commerce."

Administration Senators, led by Senator Bankhead, (Democrat), of Alabama, meanwhile opened a desperate drive to turn back the Clark anti-subsidy rider, approval of which following the House action would junk the whole food subsidy program.

Bankhead said the amendment would hit "millions of people whose incomes have not been increased—school teachers, widows, farmers, policemen, clerks in stores, stenographers and other white collar workers."

President Roosevelt described as close to a red herring the suggestions that someone receive complete authority over all phases of the food question. He told a press conference the real question is whether prices are to be kept down, whether we want to go into an inflationary spiral.

Eight Million Bushels of Corn Requisitioned in Midwest

As a stop-gap emergency measure designed to break temporarily the "distribution jam" preventing movement of corn to processing plants producing feed and war industrial supplies such as alcohol and explosives, the War Food Administration yesterday requisitioned the corn stocks of 96 Midwestern terminal elevators.

Between 8 and 10 million bushels of the commodity can be secured by this drastic procedure, it is believed, or enough to keep plants and Eastern dairy and poultry going for the month to six weeks needed for working out a solution to the grave overall feed and livestock situation.

The order does not touch the country's bountiful supply of probably one billion bushels of corn held on farms because farmers can realize from 25 to 35 cents a bushel more by feeding it to their own pigs, cows, and poultry than by selling it at the ceiling price of $1.07 a bushel at Chicago.

To move the farm supply, commodity experts declared, the retail ceiling must be lifted, subsidies must be employed, or the prices of pork and poultry must be lowered.

Corn is a rich source of protein and carbohydrates needed in mixed dairy feed, which also includes soybean meal, peanut meal and cottonseed meal. Wheat is a good substitute for corn in such use and the Commodity Credit Corp. has released 225 million bushels of wheat for feed purposes but at present most feed ingredients are hard to obtain. Some wheat has been purchased from Canada but transportation difficulties have provided an obstacle to its delivery.

Two additional outgrowths of the price-feed situation yesterday were:

1. The Department of Agriculture reported indications of a 1943 fall pig crop of about 53 million head, or an increase of about 21 per cent over the high 1942 autumn yield. This prospective crop is considerably larger than War Food Administrator Chester C. Davis had recommended.

Pointing to the rapid rate at which the Nation's feed stocks were disappearing, Davis several weeks ago asked a "leveling off" of pig production.

2. Cattle pens in Chicago stood empty as cattle receipts totaled only 800 head at Union Stockyards, in comparison to 8500 on Wednesday, and other yards reported similar declines. Farmers were withholding cattle from the market because buyers have lowered their offering prices, livestock dealers said.

The WFA will requisition elevator corn stocks regardless of previous contracts. All contracts will be examined and shipment permitted only when judged to be in the interest of the war effort.

Requisition follows previous Government action designed to make corn available. The Commodity Credit Corp., which had nearly 97 million bushels under loan on January 12, started calling its loans—but farmers are finding it comparatively simple to pay off the loans themselves. The average loan on the 1942 crop, of which CCC holds 49 million bushels, was 77 cents and so the CCC is getting no corn.

Total corn stocks in the country on April 1 was 1,512,000,000 bushels. Supplies for the 1942-43 marketing year totaled 3,677,000,000 bushels—a new record—but record numbers of livestocks are on the farms to eat this and there have been unprecedented industrial war requirements for alcohol, sugar, starch, and other industrial products.

Farmers Strike, Laborites Charge

should "go to the Agriculture Committee and start talking sense."

For consumers and farmers to be divided on the food question is the "worst kind of senselessness," he asserted.

"When people throughout the country start feeling effects of the withholding tax they will start writing into Washington begging for lower prices," he declared, and the only way to "get them is by subsidies."

To say subsidies are new and radical, he said, "is just a lot of bunk."

Boris Shiskin of the A. F. of L., who represented President William Green, declared many of that organization's workers in food processing plants were being thrown out of work by the "strikes along the corn and meat front." He charged the cost-of-living index of the Bureau of Labor Statistics does "not begin to tell the story of how much food has gone up."

"When we make our surveys, we actually buy the food—not just price it," he said.

Approximately 300 consumer and labor representatives, mostly from New York and nearby cities, attended the mass meeting and pledged their support to the roll-back and subsidy price program. Representative Scanlon (Democrat) of Pennsylvania, presided, with approximately 40 Congressmen in attendance during the day.

power and criminal penalties where they apply, before taking cases to the White House.

3. What will be done to prevent the granting of the right to take a strike vote after 30 days' notice from "legalizing" strikes? It was believed in some quarters that this section placed a positive obligation on the board to act more speedily on cases—in less than 30 days in critical situations. There was some doubt that the board's machinery could be streamlined that much. Some officials believed that the agency would have to be expanded and given more funds.

Board officials anticipate many problems under this clause. Should the workers vote to strike after having given the required 30 days notice, the Government would have no alternative but to seize the plant involved, it was said.

This action would automatically invoke penalties of a year in jail or a $5000 fine for striking a Government-held plant, but some officials expressed fear that it would open the way to union action forcing Government seizure of many war plants. Positive action by the Government to convince labor that it would lose, rather than gain under Government operation, was viewed as necessary by some officials, to protect private enterprise.

4. What about the courts? Labor has charged that the measure would open up War Labor Board maintenance of membership decisions to possible court review, thus tying the board up in the courts and creating strike situations. It was apparent that the Government would attempt to avoid future court tests of WLB as it has avoided past tests by contending that the board's chief powers stem from the war powers of the President, and hence are not subject to court review.

It was also likely that the Government would contend that provisions of the bill directing the board to render no decision contrary to the Wagner Act did not outlaw union maintenance edicts. WLB has been ordering union maintenance on the basis of a 1941 opinion from Robert J. Watts, general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board, that such orders are not in conflict with the Wagner Act.

Cooperative Buying Club Poses Zoning Problem

The issue of whether consumer cooperative clubs are to be considered as commercial ventures under the District zoning ordinance was being considered yesterday by Municipal Court after the Frederick Douglas Buying Club, 1943 Alabama Avenue Southeast, was cited in court for operating a grocery without a license.

The club, which was operated by Harry L. Terry and his wife, Negroes, was charged with conducting business in a residential zone in violation of the regulations.

Attorney Charles L. Houston, who represented the Terrys, told the court that a cooperative store and a cooperative club should be considered as being entirely different inasmuch as the former sold only to members while the latter sold to anyone.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton Korman contended that any store, club or organization engaged in buying should be considered as a commercial venture and thus come under the zoning regulations. The club was said to have had a membership of approximately 500 persons.

Germans Admit Allied Invasion Threat Is Grave

London, June 25 (INS).—An indirect admission Allied troops can be expected to succeed in their initial invasion thrust against Europe was made today by Nazi Propaganda Minister Dr. Paul Goebbels.

Although Goebbels, as usual, categorically predicted ultimate Nazi victory, he conceded that the threat of invasion was grave. In a broadcast, he said:

"We are prepared day and night for the eventuality that they (the Allies) will put their threats into practice and we have enough reserves to be able to meet them effectively at any point of our continent after a certain intermediary time."

More Miners Quit, More Furnaces Close

and perhaps work to compel compliance.

Simultaneously, Ickes was meeting with representatives of the country's coal operators to work out a plan for continued Government operation of the mines for a "considerable" period of time. Ickes appointed a committee of major operators to meet with him to work out detailed plans.

Ickes has indicated that he accepts Lewis' imposed deadline as a "fact" even though he asked Lewis to set no deadline. He announced Thursday that the Government will take a more active part in mine operation from now on to protect its interest.

Miners Out in Pennsylvania

More miners stayed away in Pennsylvania, which has apparently become the center of rank and file revolt against the U. M. W. leadership.

Since today—Saturday—is not a mandatory work day under present six-day week arrangements, there will be no further important test of the strength of the back-to-work movement until Monday when the mines reopen after a normal Sunday shutdown.

Decisions on the question were slated to be made at weekend union meetings in many cases. U. M. W. district officials stated that they were sending out organizers in an effort to secure normal operations Monday.

No governmental action on the WLB's request to the President was expected before full production was resumed in the pits.

Sheriff Charles T. Frock at Uniontown, Pa., said pickets forced workers at several pits to leave their jobs. He appointed a number of deputies to disperse the pickets and several extra State policemen were detailed to keep highways open in that region. Frock also halted the sale of beer and liquor at "danger spots."

Michael Honus, secretary-treasurer of U. M. W. District 4, commented at Uniontown that the President's rejection of the October 31 deadline was "like throwing more gasoline on the fire."

Not Run by Government

"The mines are not being run by the Government," Ralph Smith, president of a near-Uniontown local, charged. "We still get statements under company names, though now they pay us in cash instead of by company check. When we get paid by Government check and know that the company is not our boss, then we will work."

President Roosevelt reminded his press conference grimly that the country is at war—that the life of the Nation is at stake. This was interpreted as indicating the prime importance he places on the continued mining of coal.

The President said he was trying to mine coal—keep on mining it. The country has got to do it some way, or it will be cold if we don't, he said.

Neutrality Stand Is Reiterated By Turkish Paper

Ankara, Turkey, June 23 (Delayed) (AP).—The quasiofficial Istanbul newspaper Aksham said today that "Turkey's relations with Britain and America in no way warrant any expectations" that Turkey will abandon her neutrality and participate in the war.

The editorial was written by Necmeddin Sadak, a former diplomat with close connections in the foreign office. It attacked Axis claims that America and Britain were trying to push Turkey into the war.

"Turkey's neutrality is not conditioned by time or circumstances," the editorial said, "her policy being a national policy decided upon for the duration of hostilities."

He added: "Turkey never intimated to her allies she might enter the war on certain conditions, or under certain circumstances, or for this or that reward."

House Is Cool On Senate Move To Drop Auto Tax

Senatorial suggestions for eliminating the $5 automobile use tax drew a cool reception yesterday from House members, who would have to make the first move in taking the levy off the statute books.

Ways and Means Chairman Doughton (Democrat) of North Carolina, whose committee makes the first play at writing or erasing taxes, said that the automobile use tax was not scheduled for any action apart from general revenue legislation, on which the committee is slated to start work in late summer.

A bill to abolish the auto tax, introduced by Representative Van Zandt (Republican) of Pennsylvania, has been resting in the committee files since February.

New support for the tax repeal has come from Senator Mead (Democrat) of New York and from Senators Brewster of Maine and Lodge of Massachusetts (Republicans).

The new stamp is supposed to be displayed on the windshields of all cars and trucks operated after next Wednesday.

Ship From Panama Sunk; 120 on Board

Guayaquil, Ecuador, June 25 (AP).—A message from Puerto Manta said tonight that the motor ship Santa Maria en route from Panama with 120 passengers had sunk last night in the shark-infested Pacific waters off Cape Pasado, 45 miles north of Manta.

No details concerning the fate of the passengers were available immediately. The area is a dangerous navigational area.

Green Cove Springs, Fla., June 25 (AP).—Sheriff J. P. Hall of Clay County said he had received a report that a Navy plane crashed in the St. Johns River near here today with the apparent loss of 12 lives.

The sheriff said additional details were not available and that the Navy was investigating the accident.

Antistrike Bill Veto Beaten By Congress

usually a pillar of Administration strength, was angry. He did not try to conceal it.

"The President has a right to veto a bill," said Connally. Then he fairly shouted his next words: "And the Senate has a right to pass a bill over the President's veto."

Senator Hatch (Democrat), of New Mexico, briefly backed Connally's appeal for an overrider, and the roll was called.

News Breaks Up Debate

The House was busily debating an antisubsidy rider to the Commodity Credit Corp. bill when the message arrived. Word of the veto broke up the debate. In confusion, the House approved a rider to the measure shutting out price subsidies and passed the CCC bill without a record vote.

While Speaker Rayburn went into a huddle with Majority Leader McCormick, Minority Leader Martin, party whips and bill sponsors, Representative Woodrum (Democrat) of Virginia, broke into debate on the CCC bill. Said Woodrum: "We are about to lose an important battle on the home front.

"The Chief Executive for reasons undoubtedly sufficient in his own mind has vetoed the antistrike bill and the body (Senate) at the other end of the Capitol has voted to override him."

"The clerk of the Senate is present at the door with the message. The time is now for action in this body—not tomorrow, not Monday, but today. I don't want to put it off."

While Woodrum was speaking, Representative May (Democrat) of Kentucky, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee, broke out of the leadership conference to tell reporters the decision was to vote at once.

May Heckled From Floor

The President's message had singled out for criticism the strike notice and secret strike ballot provision written into the bill by the House-approved Harness-Smith amendment. To the sections contributed by the Senate, outlawing strikes in Government-owned plants, and providing a strong statutory base for WLB, he raised no serious objections.

The President said the 30 days between notice of a strike and a strike vote "might well become a boiling period instead of a cooling period." He said it might actually precipitate a strike by forcing a labor leader who is trying to prevent a strike to give the notice that would end in a strike ballot.

Opposes Ban on Contributions

Completely ignored by the bill, said the President, was labor's "no strike" pledge, which he said has been well kept except by leaders of the U. M. W. He recalled that his military, naval and war production leaders had objected that the bill might subvert its very purpose—uninterrupted production.

"Far from discouraging strikes, these provisions would stimulate labor unrest and give Government sanction to strike agitations," said the President.

Briefly, Mr. Roosevelt also objected to the bill's ban on political contributions by labor unions, as having no relation to the measure or to the war. Finally, he renewed his recommendation that the Selective Service Act be amended to permit induction of men up to age 65 for noncombat military service. With this power, he said, he could induct strikers in Government-held plants, and thus "insure the continuity of war work." He said the only other alternative would be passage of a universal draft act.

While recognizing war production objectives of the bill as "praiseworthy," he said he was so certain the strike notice and secret ballot provision would lead to more strikes that he would not be fulfilling the duties of his office if he approved the bill.

Smith's Comment Is Brief

Representative Smith (Democrat) of Virginia, original author of the section condemned by the President, issued a one-sentence comment on the veto.

"The notice and waiting period before strikes," said Smith, "upon which the President based his veto, closely follow the provisions of the Railway Labor Act, which for years has successfully prevented interruptions in railroad service."

President Philip Murray of the C. I. O. blamed congressional absentees for the overriding action and predicted popular resentment would bring about repeal of the measure. Murray commended the President for vetoing the bill and promised that organized labor would "continue to stand firmly behind the Commander in Chief and carry forward the fight for complete and speedy victory."

"It is a tragic fact," said Murray, "that the absence of a number of members of Congress made it possible for a congressional clique to engineer a sneak attack on the Commander in Chief by rushing through the overriding of the veto within minutes of its announcement. The absentee congressmen must share the blame for a major national disaster equivalent to a real military defeat for democracy."

Oil Pact Would Drain Reserve, Probe Is Told

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

The Navy's now abrogated contract with the Standard Oil Co. of California, an instrument drawn for the express purpose of conserving the rich Elk Hills naval petroleum reserve, would have been likely to produce an opposite result—almost complete exploitation of a large pool of oil in the field—the House Public Lands Committee was told yesterday.

Assistant Attorney General Norman M. Littell, in making this charge to the committee, based it on provisions fixing the rate at which Standard was to have repaid to the Navy its share of 27,500,000 barrels of oil which the agreement would have allowed the company to take from the reserve without compensation over a five-year period.

The contract assumed that by reason of its ownership of about 20 per cent of the land in the reserve, Standard was entitled to 36 per cent of the oil and the Navy 64 per cent. The Navy's share of production for the first five years of the contract was to have been repaid to the Navy, at the end of that period, at the rate of one-third of the company's portion of output.

Before the Navy could get its oil back, Littell maintained, it would have been necessary to draw a total of 174,500,000 barrels from reserve.

Estimate of Reserve

Littell called the committee's attention to a Tariff Commission estimate that at the end of 1941 oil reserves in the "shallow zone" of Elk Hills amounted to 177,551,000 barrels. The Navy, however, has estimated that the zone holds from 300 to 400 million barrels.

The contract, declared Littell, gave the Government the choice of either abandoning its policy of conserving oil in the ground, or of permitting Standard to owe it $12,250,000 indefinitely. This statement was based on the fact that the Navy's share of oil drawn in five years would have been 12,250,000 barrels at $1 a barrel.

In 15 years, he stated, the second choice would have cost the Government, in principal and interest, $37,852,500.

Unidentified Lobbyist

Littell and Representative Elliott (Democrat) of California created a mild sensation during the committee's afternoon session when they joined in reprimanding a mysterious, and still unidentified, Standard lobbyist whom they accused of circulating disparaging statements about them in the lobby of the Mayflower Hotel.

Elliott, a strapping former pugilist, promised to protect himself "if I have to do it physically" if "this gentleman continues . . . to shoot off his mouth."

"I whip them kind of monkeys in my town," the legislator shouted.

Charge by Littell

"I have been reliably informed that I am being subjected to attack on the basis of my personal qualifications," Littell declared. "A lobbyist from the Standard Oil Co. has been sitting here smiling and smirking at my remarks, who I know last night was damning and God damning this man Littell."

Neither the Assistant Attorney General nor Elliott would identify the man.

Knox Approves Probe

Three and, possibly, four congressional committees, meanwhile, headed for a jurisdictional row over which of them should have charge of the oil contract investigation. Navy Secretary Frank Knox, who appeared before two of the committees yesterday, indicated complete agreement when the House Naval Affairs Committee voted to order a full inquiry into the Navy's oil policy in general and the Elk Hills contract in particular.

The contract has been declared "illegal and invalid" in a Justice Department report, prepared by Littell and made public yesterday. As a result of this finding, the contract was canceled.

Knox Regrets Action

"I regret that I did not ask the opinion of the Justice Department before I sent the contract to the President for approval," Knox told both committees. "I should have done so. I just muffed it there."

Littell charged before the Lands Committee that the contract failed to carry out President Roosevelt's "excellent suggestion" of methods for giving the Navy exclusive control of the oil reserve. In his letter to Mr. Roosevelt transmitting the contract for White House approval, however, the Secretary stated that the agreement was "responsive" to the President's suggestions, Littell stated.

Plan Seeks To Save OWI 'Newsroom'

By the Associated Press

A compromise leaving intact the "news room" of the Office of War Information (OWI), but shearing it of its domestic and foreign propaganda activities, was reported under discussion yesterday by members of the Senate Appropriations Committee.

Senator Lodge (Republican) of Massachusetts, a committee member and former newspaper reporter, said he personally favors such a compromise, which might involve transfer of the agency's foreign section to the Office of Strategic Services (OSS).

In approving the $2,939,000,000 war agencies appropriations bill, the House allowed $28,972,000 for OWI's foreign propaganda program, but cut out all of the $5,500,000 proposed for financing its domestic work.

While there has been opposition within the Senate committee to some OWI policies under Director Elmer Davis, the recent appointment of Palmer Hoyt, publisher of the Portland Oregonian, as chief of the domestic bureau was said to have allayed some Republican criticism.

Hoyt is a long-time personal friend of Republican Leader McNary (Oregon), and there were indications the latter would support a move to restore at least a part of the OWI domestic appropriation.

Lodge said he thought the OWI might well dispense with its publication and motion picture activities on the home front, so far as they are concerned with the production of direct dissemination of information to the public.

He said he felt there might be a need for its services in assembling and coordinating information from various Government agencies, making that information readily available to the press and radio.

De Valera to Call Parliament To Pick Eire's Prime Minister

By the Associated Press

Dublin (Saturday), June 26.—Eamon De Valera, whose party lost its working parliamentary majority in Eire's first wartime election, said today the Dail would be convened at the first practical time to nominate a Prime Minister—his job for the past 11 years.

New York-born De Valera, who retained his seat, would not comment on the setback suffered by his Fianna Fail Party in Tuesday's balloting.

Nomination of Prime Minister, he said, would determine the government to be in office and the policy to be followed. He added that the country faced serious problems, must maintain constant vigilance in defense, and produce to the limit of its capacity.

Complete returns gave the Fianna Fail 67 seats; the Fine Gael, headed by former Irish Free State President William T. Cosgrave, 32; Labor, headed by William Norton, 17; Farmers, 9, and Independents, 13—giving the combined opposition a majority of four seats more than the Fianna Fail.

The 1938 balloting gave the Fianna Fail 77 seats.

While the heads of the lesser parties have not committed themselves publicly, Cosgrave has campaigned for a coalition government of all parties, and De Valera has said he would not join such a government.

The outcome of the election was not expected to produce any switch in the country's foreign policy, for its continued neutrality was not an election issue.

General Adler Won't Testify On Air Depots

On the ground of "strategic military considerations," Brig. Gen. E. E. Adler, chief of the personnel and training division, Army Service Command, yesterday declined to tell the House Civil Service Committee why air depots were located in congested areas.

His refusal to answer, delivered after he was warned by Chairman Ramspeck (Democrat) of Georgia, that the hearing was open, was in response to Ramspeck's charge that the Army had caused much larger appropriations by building air depots in congested areas.

Ramspeck declared the location of these air depots "had something to do with political considerations."

Adler was questioned at length about conditions at the Fairfield Depot near Dayton, Ohio, and answered reports of loafing there with the statement that the Air Service Command was considering giving up "the owl," or late shift, when most "loafing" occurs.

OWI Has Its First Overseas Fatality

In the first fatality among men assigned to foreign propaganda by the Office of War Information, Frederick William Boissevain of Greenwich, Conn., was killed Wednesday at an overseas station.

Boissevain's death was announced last night by Robert E. Sherwood, director of OWI's overseas branch.

New Data Offered Linking Viereck to Nazis

By Adele Bernstein
Post Staff Writer

Fresh disclosures of the tie-in between the flood of Nazi-shipped propaganda which poured into this country shortly before the war and the activities here of George Sylvester Viereck were produced in District Court yesterday, as the third trial of the German agent opened before Justice Bolitha J. Laws and a newly impaneled jury.

Brought here from Seattle, Wash., where he is assistant postmaster, Emory A. Ringstead told the Court that in April, 1940, "several hundred sacks" of mail from Germany had attracted his attention because their postmarks indicated a "surprisingly" devious route. Instead of being shipped through the usual Atlantic channels, they had traveled from Berlin through Siberia, Japan, Vancouver in Canada, and thence to the American postoffice in Seattle.

"Pretty Unusual"

Six weeks later, another curious shipment arrived, the witness said, bearing similar postmarks. This time, however, the contents were found "unmailable" and were turned over to customs officials. All the sacks contained books, bearing the imprint of the German Information Office in Berlin.

"They were pretty unusual," Ringstead said, "rather horrible."

Defense Counsel Leo A. Rover objected to what he termed "volunteered" description, but the witness identified one of the mailed pieces as a book about "Polish cruelties against Germans."

"And to whom were these books addressed?' Federal Prosecutor Albert E. Arent asked.

"As I recall," said Ringstead, "they were going to various consuls and embassies, and also to college professors and presidents."

The purpose of this testimony, Arent told the court, was to show the source of this propaganda in Berlin. "We shall show later how Viereck worked directly for this source and subsequently disseminated similar material in this country," he declared.

Chemist Testifies

Richard Vowles, a chemist with the Hercules Power Co. in Chattanooga, Tenn., took the stand to describe how in May of 1940, while awaiting a return visa in the town of Mamo, Sweden, he had walked into the German Foreign Office there and taken away with him several books in Swedish, English and German.

Among these, he identified a copy of "One Hundred Families Who Rule the Empire," written in German.

This was the isolationist, anti-British book which was published in an English-language version several months later by the New Jersey firm of Flanders Hall, an outfit the prosecution said it would show was controlled and subsidized to the tune of $22,500 by Viereck. And this was the book, the Government maintains, with which American Congressmen were widely circularized by Viereck and his cohorts, Prescott Dennett and George Hill, the latter a former clerk in the office of Representative Hamilton Fish (Republican) of New York.

Speaking to the jury in an opening address, Special Prosecutor George A. McNulty, Who with Arent, is trying the German agent for the Government on six violations of the Foreign Agents Registration Act, declared that "the evidence will show that this man Viereck was in direct and intimate contact with the men who framed the policies of the German government.

"His job was to publish in this country and disseminate material here which would help the German objectives. And there was never any indication in the books published by his Flanders Hall that they were based on or were direct translations from material put out by the German Foreign Office in Berlin . . . And this he did without informing his own State Department." (Viereck is an American citizen.)

Ruse Trips Soldier Claiming Paternity Of Joan's Baby

Lon Angeles, June 25 (AP).—Pvt. Fred Steinhauser, who hitch-hiked here from Camp Hulen, Tex., to claim fatherhood of Joan Berry's unborn child, was in military custody, tripped up, her attorney says, by a ruse.

Steinhauser said he had come here to prove he, not Charlie Chaplin, as Miss Berry alleges, is the father, and to offer her marriage.

So Miss Berry's attorney, Jack Irwin, arranged a meeting between the soldier and a girl investigator who posed as Joan. Irwin says Steinhauser greeted the operative eagerly and rushed to embrace her. Steinhauser was taken in custody by military police who said he apparently was absent without leave from his post.

Chaplin, recently married to Miss Oona O'Neill, denies paternity of the unborn babe.

Stymied Court

Congress appears to be under the necessity of amending the Judicial Code so that five members of the Supreme Court, rather than six as at present, shall constitute a quorum. Two cases of more than ordinary importance recently appealed to the Court cannot be disposed of because that tribunal does not have a quorum of justices who regard themselves as qualified to act in those cases. The law does not disqualify any member of the Supreme Court in any case, but tradition and sound judicial practice forbid the justices to sit in cases with which they have had any connection before ascending the bench. Adherence to that practice by the present Court seems to require action by a simple majority.

Several other means of solving the problem have been suggested. One proposal is that retired justices be recalled when a quorum of active justices cannot be secured. Both the wisdom and constitutionality of that plan are doubtful. One other suggestion is that a Circuit Court of Appeals be designated to sit in cases of this sort that cannot be heard by the Supreme Court. But one of the cases in question has already been decided by a Circuit Court. It would be utterly impractical to designate one Circuit Court to pass judgment upon the work of another. By all odds the most direct and reasonable means of meeting the issue is Representative Sumners' bill providing that a majority of the Court shall constitute a quorum.

In approving this action, however, no one should forget the real cause of the Court's difficulty. As Chief Justice Stone pointed out at a hearing before the House Judiciary Committee Thursday, the Court has an unusual number of former Attorneys General. Four of its members have gone straight to the Court from high posts in the Department of Justice, where they naturally were concerned with litigation in which the Government is involved. Witnesses at the hearing knew of no cases on which the Court was unable to get a quorum until recent years, although the Court was formerly permitted to make decisions by a simple majority. Presumably no difficulty would have been encountered under the two-thirds rule if the President had not overweighted the Supreme Bench with appointees directly from the Government service.

Taft On Subsidies

The Taft amendment to the bill extending the life of the Commodity Credit Corp. and increasing its borrowing power provides a thoroughly sound method of dealing with subsidy problems. The amendment is in no sense a partisan measure. It represents a sincere effort to head off subsidy abuses without imposing sweeping restrictions that would cause the Administration grave embarrassment and handicap its program of price control.

The amendment would permit the RFC to borrow 500 million dollars to be used within the next year to pay subsidies for the purpose of either encouraging production or holding down prices. This sum, it is estimated, would be amply sufficient to finance the price rollback in respect of meats, butter and coffee, already announced by the Administration. The CCC would likewise be authorized to borrow up to 175 million dollars for subsidy purposes during the next 12 months. The sums thus allocated would, Senator Taft explains, cover commitments already made and prevent the undertaking of further subsidy commitments. However, limitations do not apply either to subsidies paid to cover increased transportation costs resulting from the war, or to subsidies paid to encourage production of strategic minerals and critical war materials.

The RFC and the CCC have been paying out large sums in the form of subsidies of these exempted types for a long time, in accordance with actual or presumed legal authorization. Most of these subsidies, which cover a great variety of commodities, have saved money for the Government or the public and have been justified as emergency expedients. Congress has known about them for a long time, and has shown no disposition to criticize them. The present controversy was precipitated not because of opposition to subsidies as such, but because of the executive order authorizing a specific kind of food rollback subsidy of which Congress disapproved. In our opinion that disapproval was well warranted, but the deed is done. Moreover, the Administration maintains that the payment of rollback subsidies is warranted under the Price-Control Act.

Although Senator Taft doubts the legality of rollback subsidy payments, he has no desire to force the Administration to repudiate commitments already made. Nor does he wish to cut off all subsidies undiscriminatingly. In brief, his purpose is to outline a policy for future guidance that will strictly limit the amounts that can be paid out in the form of general consumer subsidies and define the general purposes for which subsidies may be paid. That is the only rational method of procedure. At this late date it would be disastrous for Congress to reverse the policies of subsidization that it has tacitly approved or actively indorsed in the past.

Instead of making the subsidy question a partisan issue, Senator Taft has frankly conceded that Congress itself is to blame for not deciding what policy to pursue and for failing to specify more exactly the purpose for which funds may be used by the RFC and other Government agencies. The Taft amendment meets a long-felt need of clarification. Congress could do no better than accept it. It is a pleasure to see the Ohioan pointing a way through the existing "muddle, confusion and bickering." His stature in the Senate takes on another cubit as a result of his leadership on this vexed subject.

Invitation To Chaos

The one certainty about John L. Lewis' revolt against the Government in wartime is that the revolt has not yet been put down. Those who breathed a sigh of relief when Mr. Lewis and his policy committee ordered the miners to go back to work are now seen to have been overly optimistic.

A large percentage of the miners are now defying both the Government and their leaders. So the principal issue in the dispute is still a long way from being settled. No doubt that is why Congress so emphatically overrode the President's veto of the Connally-Smith bill yesterday.

From the beginning the larger issue in this controversy has been whether the Government would permit a selfish faction to gain its ends by jeopardizing the entire war program. Of course, the continued mining of coal was always a primary consideration. But even that question was overshadowed by the miners' defiance of the Government; for obviously if one group can impose its will upon the Government by threatening to sabotage the war program, all others will use the same tactics, and the last stage would be worse than the first.

The fact which stands out most glaringly from the present situation is the refusal of John L. Lewis to sign a contract with the mine operators as ordered by the War Labor Board. In line with his consistent policy of defying the WLB, Mr. Lewis merely ordered the miners back to work until October 31 on condition that the Government continue to operate the mines. But the Government cannot continue to operate the mines without inflicting a grave injustice upon the operators who have cooperated with the WLB and accepted its decision. Nor can it accept Mr. Lewis' terms without creating the dangerous assumption that WLB decisions will not be enforced against labor unions in any event.

So the whole controversy is right back where it started. What is worse is Secretary Ickes' apparent surrender in the face of Mr. Lewis' defiance. He is quoted as saying that developments "indicate that the Government will be compelled to continue custody and operation of the mines for a considerable period of time." In other words, one branch of the Government expects to flout the decision of another branch. The WLB has good reason to protest against this weak-kneed deference to the little dictator who has already directed three wartime strikes and now presumes to lay down the terms on which he will refrain from further sabotage.

It is against this background of fumbling administration and continued defiance of the Government that we have to view President Roosevelt's veto of the Connally-Smith bill yesterday and the overriding of that veto. Whatever its defects—and we have often pointed out that it has some serious shortcomings—this bill gives the President a formidable weapon against recalcitrant leaders of the Lewis type. It gives the WLB statutory authority to impose its jurisdiction upon the wild men of both industry and labor. It provides a definite formula not only for the taking over of war plants in case of stoppages resulting from labor disputes, but also for the return of such properties to their rightful owners at the earliest practicable time.

The choice which the President made was a choice between orderly procedure in dealing with the Lewis revolt and loose improvisation that to date has led from one crisis to another. His veto would have left Government authority on the home front weak and vulnerable where it should be strong and forthright. It would have carelessly weakened the United States in meeting the problems of this global war in which we are all engaged. It is that danger against which the Senate and House so emphatically revolted. They have informed the President in effect that the United States must not cravenly yield to the threats of a little dictator, and if the President has not lost his ability to sense the temper of the country he will lose no time in applying the provisions of this act wherever it appears to be necessary.

Save FSA

It is plain that the dominant Farm Bureau bloc in the House has not relaxed its determination to scalp the Farm Security Administration. Even the very considerable cuts in the appropriation for this agency proposed by the Senate did not satisfy its enemies in the lower chamber. They hope to cripple FSA beyond any possibility of survival. Consider, for example, the process by which FSA's budget for administrative expenses has been whittled away. During the past fiscal year, FSA had about 42 million dollars to spend for administration. The Budget Bureau, eager to economize, pared this to 37 million dollars in submitting the agency's request for the year ahead. The Senate then brought the sum down to 29 million dollars. Now the House insists that this be slashed to a mere 20 million dollars.

FSA has about a billion dollars in assets to be serviced. It simply cannot do an effective job with so curtailed a budget, even on its loans which are at present outstanding. And clearly, it will be unable to make additional loans to the million or so small farmers who urgently need Federal assistance in order to step up their production for war purposes. In view of current food shortages, it seems sheer folly to hamstring FSA at a time when its services to the family farmers are most urgently needed.

The notion that needed loans for small farms can and will be made by private lending agencies stems from a complete misunderstanding of FSA's function. Private lending agencies, to begin with, are prone to charge higher rates of interest than marginal farmers can afford to pay. What is even more important, they cannot provide the assistance to farmers in the form of counsel and supervision which is genuinely needed to make the loans effective. FSA does much more than lend money. It helps farmers to make a success of farming.

The Senate still has an opportunity to insist on fair play and a fair chance for FSA. Despite the adamant attitude of the House and the assertion by Representative Tarver that the Senate will acquiesce in the latest House proposal, it is to be hoped that the upper chamber will adhere to its earlier stand. The Farm Bureau has won more than enough concessions already. FSA has important work to do. It should be given the means to do it.

Rotting Ruhr

It used to be said that "the destiny of the Ruhr is the destiny of Germany." But that was prior to industrial dispersion. Yet the importance of the Ruhr still remains tremendous. Of total German output, according to British authorities, the contribution of the Ruhr in hard coal, coke, pig iron, steel ingots and castings, and special steels averages two-thirds.

This does not argue very much dispersion of heavy industry. The fact seems to be that while the lighter type of engineering plant can be dispersed and moved elsewhere, the heavy industries of the Ruhr, the blast furnaces and the rolling mills, are the basic industries. "We do not believe," said Britain's Minister of Economic Warfare, Lord Selborne, recently, "that in this stage in the war their transfer would be possible. If it were possible to transfer the plant and the machinery, it would then be necessary to shift the population, and then to transport the coal and coke." The Germans already have encountered difficulties in supplying moved plants in Luxembourg and Belgium.

Of course, the Allies now have to reckon with the resources of Axis Europe, not of Germany alone. What is the ratio of Ruhr output to the total for Axis Europe? Lord Selborne essays the following interesting figures:

Hard coal	34 per cent
Coke	50 per cent
Pig iron	37 per cent
Steel ingots and castings	34 per cent
Special steels	27 per cent

This puts a different complexion on the significance of the Ruhr in the Nazi war effort. But the ratio is still high. It is high enough to persuade the onlooker that the softening effects of the bombing, added to the slow rot coming from the blockade, are considerable.

THE DREAM OF LEAFY BOUGHS

The winter-tightened window overmats
With dots of diamond like the wings of gnats.
The hand of air, inimical and bright,
Is turned against warm-blooded things tonight,
And only glass divides the pointed air
From lampglow melting colours in your hair.

Now stir your cup of golden tea, and speak
Of beaches, and the burn that rosed the cheek.
Far away in winter white, remember
How deep July was moss that wrapped an ember.

Your forehead prickled under sweat and straw,
Heat was a blue-white diamond with a flaw.
The shining flies like flakes of coloured tin
Floated in mid-air; ponderous with sun
There hung upon the over-ripened hour
The dull pink tassels of the milkweed flower.

Beside the white felt window-pane the dream
Of leafy boughs is conjured up in steam;
Green apples shine in winter's marble wreath,
And summer walks with parsley on her breath.

Centers Threatened

FOR A "POLITICAL" Congress with rankling grievances of this and that sort, the Seventy-eighth has kept remarkably well to the axiom that the domestic issues should end at the water's edge, that is, where foreign policy begins. But foreign relations nowadays fuse into matters at first sight entirely domestic, and the Congress appears about to slip a cog on two of these.

This happened when resentment over OWI's activities on the home front carried over into the House's consideration of the budget for the Office of the Coordinator of Inter-American Affairs and caused them to curtail two home-front programs that, although small in terms of money to be spent, are very important so far as our foreign relations are concerned.

Mexican-Americans

One of these items was an appropriation to provide partial financing for inter-American centers in a number of our large cities. The other was a special program just started in the Southwest for the purpose of easing some of the difficulties that have arisen there between Americans of Anglo-Saxon descent and Mexican-Americans. In all about three million dollars were trimmed from the agency's appropriation. These two programs called for $205,000.

The Representatives who cut out funds for the Inter-American Centers cannot have fully realized what a strong current of interest in Latin America has materialized among the American general public in the last few years. The rapidity with which this interest has increased since Pearl Harbor is one of the most amazing phenomena of the Second World War.

That 25 of the largest cities in the United States and scores of smaller ones turned out with large-scale community celebrations of Pan American Day this year is significant. For two years now 26 of the largest national women's organizations—including the League of Women Voters—have featured inter-American subjects on a year-round basis. Their membership adds up to 12 million.

The Nation's teachers, in the National Educational Association, and the librarians, in the American Library Association, are doing all they can to help the American people inform themselves about Latin America. Fifty-six colleges and universities held inter-American forums this year. There were attended by thousands upon thousands of the general public.

Nor is this all. The businessmen of America are behind the idea and are ready to do something about it. The United States Chamber of Commerce and the Junior Chamber of Commerce, which together count thousands of the country's civic leaders, are active in the movement.

American Legion

But the newest and strongest organization to put official weight behind it is the American Legion. The legion's 11,500 posts count one and one-half million member. The auxiliary, which has followed their lead, has half a million members.

On May 15, the American Legion adopted Pan Americanism as part of their official Americanism program. They are going to get out and push the idea of our learning what it's all about in Latin America and what our interests in that region are.

People active in all these many Nation-wide organizations have created a considerable pressure for authentic information about Latin America. Requests for material pour into Washington in thousands monthly and this is only the beginning. We have often been called an isolation-minded people. The general public is proving that this is not true so far as Latin America is concerned.

The centers whose existence is now threatened act as focal points for the activities of all the various groups and as clearing houses for information. Obviously they fill a real need.

The special program in the Southwest was to aid some of the leading universities there in a plan to enlist civic leaders in the matter of integrating Mexican-Americans into community activities. Thirty-five per cent of all Arizonans, 8 per cent of Californians, 56 per cent of New Mexicans and 17 per cent of all Texans are of Mexican descent. The plan was a start in the long, slow process of educating away a serious American regional problem that has far-reaching international complications.

It is an established fact that war nerves and criminal activities set off Los Angeles recent zoot-suit troubles. It is unhappily as true that they degenerated into race riots involving Mexican-Americans. The whole incident has been soft-pedaled officially, yet the Mexican government asked us informally to do something as quickly as we could, since it was inflaming Mexican public opinion against us. We must not forget that Mexico is a Latin-American leader.

If we are to learn about the hemisphere where we lead today and are to educate ourselves to get along with our fellow Mexican-Americans, it is going to cost us some money. If it costs us only $205,000 a year, it would be very cheap at the price.

The Axis At Bay

By Barnet Nover

Another Change In Axis Strategy

REPORTS which have reached London indicate that the Axis is in process of shortening its anti-invasion defenses by reducing its garrisons in the Mediterranean islands and southernmost Italy and concentrating more and more strength in western Europe and the Balkans.

If this is so, and there appears to be no reason to doubt it, it means that for the second time in less than a year the German high command has again found it necessary to alter its basic strategy.

A year ago that strategy consisted in remaining on the defensive in the west while carrying out simultaneous offensives in Russia and Africa.

The German offensive on the Eastern Front began with an assault on the Kerch Peninsula early in May and reached its high-water mark with the investment of Stalingrad. In the African theater the Axis high-water mark was Rommel's drive across Egypt to El Alamein.

BY SEPTEMBER it became evident to the German high command, and even to the German people, that something had gone wrong with this strategy. Stalingrad held as did the British Eighth Army before Alexandria. So Hitler found it necessary, in the same speech in which he announced that Stalingrad would yet be taken—"you can depend on that"—to warn his people that Germany was preparing to go at least temporarily and selectively on the defensive.

"For this year," said Hitler on September 30, "we have laid out a very simple program. First: Under all circumstances to hold what had to be held. To hold unflinchingly and wait to see who will be the first to weaken."

In other words, Germany, while no longer able to carry the war to the enemy, was determined to prevent the enemy from bringing the war to her. On November 8, the day after British and American troops had landed in French North Africa, Hitler returned to the microphone to explain why a defensive strategy involved fighting in distant theaters.

"Many a person will ask himself," said Hitler on that occasion, "why are we fighting at such great distances? We are fighting at such great distances in order to protect our homeland, in order to keep the war as far removed from it as possible and to spare it what would otherwise be its fate, and which now only certain German cities are experiencing and must experience. It is therefore preferable to keep the front line at a distance of 1000 and if necessary 2000 kilometers from the borders of the Reich, than to hold that front somewhere near the border of the Reich and be forced to hold it there."

THE DISTANCE from home at which Germans are now fighting is a good deal less now than it was last November. Tunisia has been captured by the Allies, the Axis hold on Sicily and the other Mediterranean islands grows precarious, and Allied air power has brought the war home to more and more German cities with steadily mounting force.

The defensive policy pursued by the Axis in western Europe and Africa has, therefore, done the Germans no good even though the nearest Allied armies are still far removed from German soil. By the same token it is doubtful whether Germany can long retain her present holdings in Russia if circumstances compel her to abandon the planned offensive on the Eastern Front.

IT IS TRUE THAT by abandoning offensive operations on the Eastern Front more Axis divisions and more air power could be concentrated at possible invasion points in the west and south of Europe than would would otherwise be the case.

It is understood, for instance, that between 10 and 12 additional divisions have been added to the Axis garrison in France and that a large number of additional troops have been rushed into the Balkans.

Yet there are simply not enough men in all the armies of Germany, Italy and the satellite states to guard the so-called fortress of Europe with sufficient force to make invasion impossible at every point.

The very circumstance that the Allies can now invade at many points along the great arc extending from the North Cape to the Aegean compels a dispersal of Axis strength that may leave some of the danger points inadequately protected.

IF THIS IS TRUE of possible Allied land operations it is even more true of possible—and actual—Allied air operations.

The R. A. F. has announced that in the month between May 23 and June 23 a total of 18,000 tons of bombs were dropped on Germany by British bombers with each of seven Ruhr cities receiving a weight of bombs at least three times as great as the maximum tonnage of bombs ever dropped on London in any one raid. Yet Germany has concentrated in the Ruhr the very cream of the Luftwaffe's fighter strength and a tremendous aggregation of antiaircraft artillery.

To be sure, Allied losses in bombers during the last month have been heavy; but these losses have not been excessive, in relation either to the total Allied air power or in relation to the damage done. And in this process of aerial attrition Germany is far less able to take her losses than are the Allies.

We cannot yet be sure that the planned German offensive on the Eastern Front will not take place, although the sands are beginning to run out on that possibility. If it does not, and if Germany goes on the defensive everywhere, the shrinkage of her defense lines which has been taking place recently and which, according to London, is continuing, will go on indefinitely.

For Germany a strategy of all-out defense means certain doom.

Letters To The Editor

Communications must carry the writer's name and address, though pen names are permitted at the editor's discretion. Letters should be held to not more than 200 words. They are subject to condensation.

S O S From France

An S O S is contained in a letter from France published in London, May 15. It states:

"If within a short time the United Nations do not act energetically, the progressive extermination of France will begin and will be short.

"It is necessary it should be known that one of the most cultivated nations of the world is dying within sight of its Allies.

"Hunger, progressively brought about, is now general.

"While the summer in the country lessens slightly this danger, the coming winter will be the last of the French nation, unless . . .

"This is not exaggerated. Whole cities find on their markets, for weeks at a time, only two vegetables, spinach and turnips, in minute quantities. Potatoes are more than rare. Meat is spoken of in the past tense. Flour and starchy products have also vanished. There are no longer any fats. Bread is a poison. But this is only a phase.

"France had an elite and an army. The world owes something to that elite and that army for what they did in 1918. In 1940, the collapse of this army, betrayed by him whose duty was to represent it in the Council of Ministers, served the Allied cause to the extent that Germany took the southern route instead of proceeding in a westerly direction.

"Since 1940, tens of thousands of Frenchmen resist and await the hour of taking arms anew. Because they remain faithful to the United Nations there is a will to suppress them. Suppression is the real word.

"These men have no longer any shoes, and their clothes are in pieces . . . Raids reach the officers, the workers and the men from 21 to 31 years old, namely those who formed the entire standing army on general mobilization. These are millions of men, the most vigorous—the framework of the nation—and among whom there are so many high-type men. The turn of the others will come.

"An Allied army is being wiped out under the eyes of the United Nations. All the officers of this army, all the soldiers, await a message which has not yet come—a message promising precise facts.

"Every day the Germans arrest the best men in thousands. They proceed to a choice through lists of suspects (people who are suspected of being too fond of England or America). Every day, lacking resources, first-line soldiers are leaving under a camouflaged death sentence."

The letter goes on to give ample particulars in support of these general statements.

Such a warning deserves to come to the attention of the American people at a time when all that stands in the way of the rescue of the French nation from utter destruction is lack of sufficient means for a timely and successful invasion of the European continent. Every one of the 531,000 miners who have stopped work should be told about this. The warning should be read in every factory, it should be published in every newspaper in the Nation.

Long ago, French blood was shed for American independence. In this very war, many more French have died in defending the cause of the United Nations than Americans. From every part of France comes this S O S. Will America hear and, hearing, act in time?

What's A Father

In today's editorial, instructing General Hershey in the facts of life, you seem oblivious of a considerable biological error, in addition to the error you point out. Apparently neither you nor General Hershey know that a man who conceived a child at any time would be not its father but its mother! KENTON KILMER.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Private Purkey's Strike Continues

Dear Ed:

My posishun in my strike is the same as John Lewis's. I will not obey no orders from my top governsergeant but only from the governmint. I do not like the rules and regulashuns as given to us by the sarge nohow, so I cancel him out and if the government wants me to do anything in this war it will have to ask me direct.

* * * *

I am still in the brig for demanding shorter hours, more dough and pay from foxhole to foxhole in the army, but I just gave out a statement witch is word for word like the one from Eyebrows Lewis. Just like him I will make every sacrifice for my country but I won't do any fighting accept on my own terms, I am for the well being of the citizens but I want what I want when I want it. Also like Lewis I will uphold the flag at all times so long as I make the rules for upholding it.

* * * *

I am just a victim of a continuing conspiracy between the first sarge, General Eisenhower, my draft board and a unkind fate. (I got that idea from Mr. Lewis, too. He certainly can express things.)

* * * *

From the minute I threw down my gun, thumbed my nose at the sarge and refused to obey a order to go over the top, I have tried in every way to cooperate with the Government in winning the war. All my refusals to do what I was told to do was marked by a honest desire to play fair with my country and aid it in every way. I yield to no man in my love of country even when I am giving it the works.

* * * *

It is all up to Mr. Ickes. I refuse to have nothing to do with my commander in chief or anybody directly in charge of my outfit. And I fling in their teeth the statements of some people that by refusing to fight with the rest of the army I am hampering the war effort. Such cracks is just typikul of vested interests, enemies of the army and people who think it is wrong for a soldier to quit when he dont like the condishuns under which he is fighting.

I hope this explanes my atterude.

As ever, OSCAR.

P. S.—No contrack no fight!

Army Assist

Dear Hi—Know what they're gonna play as an overture next time Hitler and Mussolini get together? "Let's Get Lost."

Incidentally, Hi, there's a soldier in my barracks at Fort Custer who's been on K. P. so long he's got bags under his hands. Sincerely, PVT. JAY RUSSELL,
Fort Custer, Michigan.

We were a spectator during the recent rush to buy new shoes. Never before did we see so many heels getting shoes put on them.

Then there's the man who took a pair of shoes back and tried to exchange them for a clean conscience.

Jim Farrell wants to know if you can remember away back when the wife would pour milk onto the potatoes when she mashed them.

It's just possible that the plight of the laundries is due to the fact that all the bayonets they used to use on shirts are now being used in the war effort.

Sensible Men Stuff

Speaking of "Sensible Men Stuff," I note with interest the suggestion of Christopher Magee and believe he's just returned from West Africa.

A former buddy of mine now working in Africa has just written: "We come to the office dressed, if not with the same garments, at least by the same system the girls use nowadays in the U. S. A. In other words, you can see everything we have on, sport shirt (without tie), shorts, socks and shoes. And due to the lack of supplies here, many of the white girls wear just the same. You can usually distinguish them from the men, however."

As for the hat, C. M., why not absorb some of the sun's rays and get healthy? As for long sleeves, let's look around the office first thing and note how many men having worked into a lather, pushing themselves through the crowds walking to work, roll their cuffs at least halfway to the elbow or use a couple of rubber armbands, pulling their sleeves up as far as the buttons will permit. I ask you, "Why not short sleeves?" After all, the girls work and do they have long sleeves?

Short pants are OK in Africa, but, after all, it's not quite that hot here—yet.

Let's tuck the shirt tails in and retain long pants. There must be a certain amount of dignity retained in overcrowded, overheated, fashionable Washington even in wartime summertime.

LEO GRAUBNER.
Washington, June 24.

The Flag

The decision of the Supreme Court is that a salute to the Flag is no longer obligatory. And, I take it, that no one now need remove the hat when the Flag is passing nor stand when hearing the National Anthem. I imagine the justices will be swamped with letters quoting that line of Shakespeare's: "For this relief much thanks." However, the Court said nothing about wiping the pledge of allegiance off the books, but if that also was intended then we have been made just a nation of aliens.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Critical Days In French Affairs

NO OBJECTIVE or remotely complete report on the French political situation has as yet been published here, nor, it would seem, in Great Britain. The heaviest discount must, therefore, be placed on the reports from Algiers, London, and Washington. Perhaps this state of affairs can be justified on the grounds of military expediency. But the American people do have the right to know that in this affair they are not being informed by an independent journalism, and to be on notice, therefore, that they must treat with the utmost reserve the superficial, trivial, and ex parte commentaries which pretend that the issues in this great business are personal and temperamental.

LIPPMANN

This has to be said now because it is certain that the situation created in North Africa this past week by the Anglo-American intervention is in the nature of things unstable. It is so unstable that it may have consequences which only informed and convinced public opinion in the United States and in the British Isles can repair. For the fundamental fact is that the two governments in Washington and London have during this week taken the momentous action of imposing their will upon the men charged with organizing and leading the French movement of national liberation.

The officially inspired interpretation of this action is that a troublesome and politically ambitious outsider, named Charles de Gaulle, has been suppressed so that General Giraud, surrounded by single-minded patriots, may devote his whole attention to fighting the enemy. But this interpretation is simply the same primary fallacy which has vitiated so tragically United States diplomatic policy in regard to France. For if General de Gaulle were a mere troublesome outsider, it would not have been necessary, and indeed it would have been foolish, to let him go to Africa in the first place.

The reason he was allowed to go is that he has become, increasingly and over more intensely, the acknowledged leader of the overwhelming mass of the French nation. Therefore, the unification of the French for effective participation in the war and the peace is impossible without him. The reason that General Eisenhower was directed by Washington and London to say that the French National Committee in Algiers could not decide the problems of French authority and French command is not that General de Gaulle is a troublesome outsider but, on the contrary, that his strength among Frenchmen, including General Giraud's own lieutenants on the committee, has been growing irresistibly.

THE GROUND on which our action has to be justified is that his demand for reform of the French army is disturbing to the older French officers who happen to be in command of General Giraud's troops. It may well be true that General de Gaulle tried to insist on moving too rapidly in purging the French army of officers who led it to a catastrophic defeat: in the hierarchy of the French army he has been for many years as right, as impatient, and no doubt as tactless, as the late Billy Mitchell was in the old American military hierarchy.

But we must not allow ourselves to forget that he is the greatest living soldier of France, and that his views on how to make a victorious French army are entitled to the utmost respect. There are French generals in Algiers who outrank him; there is none, who as staff officer or as a commander in the field, has a record which can be compared with his.

NOR DARE we, as a matter of plain conscience, allow ourselves to forget when we talk about the difficulty of dealing with him in Algiers that we have done things to him so tactless that they would have tried the patience of a saint. When he came to Algiers, General Giraud and Mr. Murphy were still retaining in high office the man Peyrouton who signed the Vichy warrant declaring General de Gaulle a traitor and condemning him to death.

If we had the slightest title to lecture anyone on the subject of tact, we would have removed Peyrouton without requiring General de Gaulle to make himself disagreeable by insisting that Peyrouton be removed. If the President thinks that he himself would act like a good fellow and a nice fixer in the presence of men who were entrusting power to his enemy who had condemned him to death for treason, he does not know the temperament of Franklin Roosevelt or indeed of any other honest and self-respecting man.

What has come over us, I ask, that we are stricken with such moral blindness?

IF IT be true that the French situation had become such that for reasons of military security we had to do what we have done, then let us have no illusions. The situation we have produced will not remain as it now is. Whatever chance General Giraud ever had of leading the French national resistance has been profoundly prejudiced. Our denial of the authority of the National Committee for French Liberation in Algiers has placed General Giraud in the unhappy position of deriving his authority solely from Washington and London. This is no way to make him popular in France.

On the other hand, the prejudice which we have displayed against General De Gaulle will strengthen him among the French. For, with a dismal lack of political wisdom, we are rapidly making this man, already the symbol of French national resistance, the symbol also of French, and not only of French but of European, independence.

THE CONSEQUENCES must not be underestimated in Washington or in London. It is a very serious business to deny to a great power, even though it is for the time being weak, the sovereign right to choose the officers who command its sons on the field of battle.

It is impossible for long to treat any people, and certainly not a people with the proud traditions of the French, with such disregard of the deepest and most elementary right of self-determination.

Let us not overlook now before it is too late and the matter is irreparable, that we are pursuing a policy which will estrange the French nation from the British and ourselves. Let us not imagine that the rest of Europe, which has always looked at France, is not watching earnestly how we treat France. Let us not imagine that Europe can be resettled and restored without the full participation of France and without the influence which France alone can exert.

If, therefore, we pursue a policy which estranges her and divides her, there will be no great friendly power in the whole of Europe from the Atlantic Ocean to the frontier of Soviet Russia. But there will be a focus of disorder and of antagonism which bodes only ill for our dearest hopes.

Rail Labor Is Disturbed

By the Associated Press

Vinson Draws Fire

New York, June 25.—Alvanley Johnston, grand chief engineer of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, charged today that denial of a wage increase to non-operating rail workers by Economic Stabilization Director Fred M. Vinson had destroyed the Railway Labor Act.

At the same time Johnston expressed belief in a statement that the case of five railroad operating brotherhoods for a 30 per cent wage increase "undoubtedly" had been judged already by the economic stabilization director and if that were so "it would certainly be a farce to continue this proceeding."

His statement was read to the Emergency Board of the National Railway Wage Panel hearing arguments on the brotherhoods' demands.

Processes No Longer in Force

Referring to Vinson's overruling of an 8-cent-an-hour wage increase granted by a similar emergency board to nonoperating railroad employes, Johnston said:

The whole theory of mediation and the President's emergency board to determine controversies between the railroads and their employes has been destroyed by this decision.

"The processes that have been set up in the Railway Labor Act are no longer in effect. One man, and one man only, the economic stabilization director, has destroyed the Railway Labor Act which was enacted to give the employes and the railroads a just procedure for peaceably adjusting their difficulties."

Adding to his prepared statement, Johnston said he had been informed that employes of some of the smaller lines "are so disgruntled that they are laying down on the job."

Sees Threat to Morale

"The members of the railroad operating brotherhoods," he continued, "are among the conservative labor group in this country, but if they lose confidence in their leaders and their leaders' ability to help them they are going to become more radical. This board is confronted not merely with the question of an increase in wages but with a question of morale."

The brotherhoods completed their presentation of evidence after testimony by W. P. Kennedy, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, and Charles Decker of Houston, Tex., dining car steward of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

The railroad companies will begin presentation of their case on Monday.

More Queries Answered on Income Tax

Below is the final set in a series of questions and answers, prepared by the Treasury, on the withholding tax, effective July 1:

Q. Is the withholding tax an additional income tax?

A. No. The withholding tax is an installment or pay-as-you-go method of paying your regular annual income tax.

Q. Does this new tax mean people will not have to pay out money for income tax on next March 15, 1944?

A. Yes, in case the amount of tax withheld from wage payment equals or exceeds the amount of income tax liability reported on the annual return.

Q. Does this mean that I won't have to make out an income tax report next March?

A. No. You will be required to file a return on the usual form.

Q. Are there any kinds of workers who are exempt from withholding?

A. Yes, for certain specified classes which include members of the armed forces, agricultural labor, domestic servants, and ministers of the gospel.

Q. How about people with big wages? Are they going to get by with only a 20 per cent tax??

A. No. They also have to make quarterly payments of tax in addition to the amounts withheld.

Q. How about salaries, bonuses and commissions? Is withholding required?

A. Yes, since "wages" means all remuneration for services by an employer.

Q. How about people with income from stocks, bonds, mortgages, etc? Who withholds from them?

A. There is no withholding on income from bonds, mortgages, etc., but those receiving such income must make a special return and pay the tax quarterly on such income.

Q. I am paying all I can over and above living expenses now in purchase of War Bonds. How can I keep up these payments and pay the withholding tax?

A. I'm sure that you have been setting aside a part of your pay to meet quarterly installments of your income tax. The withholding tax is merely a "pay-as-you-go," or installment-method of paying your income tax, instead of in a lump sum. It should make it easier for you to buy additional War Bonds.

Steinbeck Tells How Bagpipes Greet U. S. Troops in Britain

Writing from England, where he has just arrived on an assignment as a war correspondent for The Washington Post, John Steinback describes the landing of the crowded troop transport on which he traveled.

By John Steinbeck

Somewhere in England, June 25.—We are coming close to land. The birds picked us up this morning and a big flying boat circled us and then darted away to report us. There has been no trouble at all and, if on the bridge the enemy has been reported, we do not know it. The word sifts down from the bridge that we shall land tonight. The soldiers line the rails and report every low-hanging cloud as a landfall. Now that we are near and the lines of our approach are narrow, the danger is greater. The ship swerves and turns constantly. These waters are the most dangerous of all.

The men are reading a little booklet that has been distributed, telling them how to get along with the English. The book explains language differences. It suggests that in England a closet is not a place in which to hang clothing; that the word bloody should be avoided; that a garbage can is a dust bin, and it warns that the English use many common words with a different meaning than we assign to them. Many of our men find this very funny and they go about talking a curious gibberish which they imagine is a British accent.

A light haze shrouds the horizon and out of it four Spitfires drive at us and circle like angry bees. They come so close that we hear the fierce whistle of their wings. For a long time they circle us and then go away and others take their place.

Britain Is Sighted

In the afternoon, land shows through the haze, and as we get closer the neat houses and the neat country, orderly and old. The men gaze at it in wonder. It is the first foreign place most of them have ever seen and each man says it looks like some place he knows. One says it looks like California in the springtime of a wet year. Another recognizes Vermont. The men crowd to the portholes and the rails.

The troopship moves into a harbor and drops her anchor. She is surrounded on all sides by shipping and by naval units. The men will go ashore in lighters, but not yet, for disembarkation is, if anything, more complicated than embarkation. Men can easily be lost or mixed with the wrong units.

The night comes and in the staff room the officers gather and wait until they are assigned the transportation for their men. It takes a good part of the night. At an exact time each unit must be in an exact place, where a lighter will be waiting to take them on. The troop trains will be waiting ashore. It has been a perfect crossing. No trouble, no sickness, no attack. The ship's officers show the strain. They haven't slept much. After a few voyages they must be relieved. The responsibility to too great for a man to bear for too long a stretch.

Lighters Take Them Off

In the morning the lighters come in and hug the sides of the troopship. The big iron doors open and the troops move out and take their places on the decks of the little boats. The portholes high above are filled with heads looking down. Men for a later debarkation. The little boat moves off, puffs up the bay among the tugs and the destroyers and the anchored freighters. The soldiers are self-conscious in a new place. They regard this new land skeptically as one must when he is not sure of himself. The little boat puffs up to the dock, which has mysteriously become a quay, pronounced key, which is, of course, ridiculous.

Now as the lighter ties up an astonishing thing happens. A band of pipers marches out in kilts, with bagpipes and drums and the swingy march of pipers. The harsh skirling cuts through the air. The most military, the most fighting music in the world. Our men crowd the rail. The band approaches, drums banging, pipes squealing, and as they draw abreast, the soldiers break into a great cheer. They may not like the harsh music; it takes time to like it, but something of iron of the music goes into them. The pipers wheel and march back and away. It was a good thing to do. Our men, in some deep way, feel honored. The music has stirred them. This is a different war than the one of training camps and strategy at post exchanges.

From the deck of the lighter the men can see the roofless houses, the burned-out houses, the piles of rubble where the bombs have fallen. They have seen pictures of this and have read about it, but that was pictures and reading. It wasn't real. This is different. It isn't like the pictures at all. On the quay the Red Cross is waiting with caldrons of coffee, with mountains of cake. They have been serving since dawn and they will serve until long after dark. The gangplank to the lighter is fixed now. The men, carrying their heavy barrack bags, packs on their backs and rifles, slung over their shoulders, struggle up the steep gangway to the new country. And in the distance they can hear the sound of the pipes greeting another lighterload of troops.

Volunteers Bolster OPA

By Anne Hagner
Post Staff Writers

They Make It Roll

Despite 230 paid employes divided among 15 local boards and 68 additional workers at its executive offices, the District Office of Price Administration would be virtually paralyzed without its staff of volunteer workers.

It is no secret at local OPA headquarters that the organization is so understaffed that it lacks sufficient investigators to carry on effective probes into black markets, pleasure driving and price-ceiling violations.

In times of emergency, the manpower situation is so serious that even its top officials are called upon to assist in mailing ceiling prices on meats to dealers. Hence volunteers are far from expendable on the OPA front; directors regard them as vital.

700 Volunteer Hours

Last week, which may be regarded as typical, 88 volunteers turned in 700 hours of work at the 15 local boards and 20 others worked at the executive office, 5601 Connecticut Avenue Northwest. All of them offered their services for such jobs through the Office of Civilian Defense Volunteers, 2324 F Street Northwest, and were assigned where they were needed most.

Furthermore, 1000 persons have assisted in the processing and mailing of War Ration Books No. 3, which must be completed July 15. They began their task May 24, and by June 16 had contributed 7548 man-hours.

A Big Job

The objectives of the District OPA are far more simple than the work it must accomplish. The local office must put into effect regulations issued by the national office in Washington (via the regional office in New York) on allocating gasoline, fuel oil, sugar, coffee, shoes, canned foods and other rationed commodities. Also it must issue community price ceilings, which during the past month kept Joseph Egert, price head, and his staff working until 4 a. m. on several occasions. Other major OPA chore is the enforcement of the entire program.

For the current fiscal year, which ends July 1, $655,924 was allocated by the regional office in New York for the District OPA for over-all expenses of the executive offices and the 15 local ration boards. Officials refused to release amounts of individual salaries.

Created January 3, 1942

D. C. OPA came into being January 3, 1942, by an act of Congress. The office actually opened two days later at 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, under funds handled by the District Commissioners. Whitney Leary, who died several weeks ago, was appointed administrator.

The first job that confronted the rationing pioneers was that of tires, then automobiles. Soon afterward came the task of setting up local price and ration boards, which increased gradually until their present number of 15. Federal Government funds have operated the office since April 1 of this year.

Cramped for space on Massachusetts Avenue, the office finally migrated en masse last July to a former school building near Chevy Chase Circle, actually too far out for convenience but the only available site that offered sufficient quarters.

Enforcement Report

What are the accomplishments of District OPA in the enforcement division of its work?

In a report prepared especially for The Post, these facts were revealed:

Since late in June, 1942, the enforcement branch has received 2500 complaints from householders, storekeepers, dealers and other such sources. Of these, 1310 have been investigated, and 60 per cent have been closed because no substantial violation could be ascertained. The others were filed for compliance surveys.

The work of the enforcement division is divided roughly into two periods: First, from the birth of OPA regulations until April 1, 1943, was concerned principally with efforts to induce voluntary compliances. Admonitory letters were mailed and informal "compliance conferences" were held to educate unintentional violators. Several hundred cases were handled in this informal fashion. Only flagrant cases were prosecuted.

The second phase began April 1, when OPA officials decided that the public had been given sufficient education and that the time had come for cracking down.

Sanctions Applied

"Sanctions"—that is, all the methods by which OPA attempts to obtain compliance — actually were applied generally for the first time. Seventy-five warning notices were sent out, principally to retail grocers, declaring that licenses would be revoked if there were any further violations. Seven refunds were given to customers in cases involving charges for commodities in excess of ceiling prices. Consumers were awarded treble damages in four instances, but in recent weeks these cases virtually have ended, following decisions of the Municipal Court of Appeals.

Suspension orders were given to 30 concerns, and about 15 are pending at the present time.

In the past three months nine potato cases have resulted in $2100 total fines; one meat case in a $1500 fine; two gasoline violations in $2000 fines, and two others in which persons received fines of $2000 and jail sentences of six months, not suspended.

Still pending are two potato cases, two meat cases and five gasoline cases. There has been only one acquittal—in a case of alleged tire violation in June, 1942.

President's Veto Text

Section 8 Faulty, Roosevelt Says

The text of President Roosevelt's veto message on the antistrike bill follows:

I am returning herewith, without my approval, S-796, the so-called war labor disputes bill.

It is not a simple bill, for it covers many subjects. I approve many of the sections, but other sections tend to obscure the issues or to write into war legislation certain extraneous matter which appears to be discriminatory. In the form submitted to me the accomplishments of its avowed purpose—the prevention of strikes in wartime—could well be made more difficult instead of more effective.

Let there be no misunderstanding of the reasons which prompt me to veto this bill at this time.

I am unalterably opposed to strikes in wartime. I do not hesitate to use the powers of Government to prevent them.

It is clearly the will of the American people that for the duration of the war all labor disputes be settled by orderly procedures established by law. It is the will of the American people that no war work be interrupted by strike or lockout.

American labor as well as American business gave their "no strike, no lockout" pledge after the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Laws are Necessary

That pledge has been well kept except in the case of the leaders of the United Mine Workers. For the entire year of 1942, the time lost by strikes averaged only five one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the total man-hours worked. The American people should realize that fact—that 99.95 per cent of the work went forward without strikes, and that only five one-hundredths of 1 per cent of the work was delayed by strikes. That record has never before been equaled in this country. It is as good or better than the record of any of our Allies in wartime.

But laws are often necessary to make a very small minority of the people live up to the standards that the great majority of people follow. Recently there has been interruption of work in the coal industry, even after it was taken over by the Government. I understand and sympathize with the general purpose of the war disputes bill to make such interruptions clearly unlawful.

Sections Interpreted

The first seven sections of the bill are directed to this objective.

Section 1 provides that the act may be cited as the War Labor Disputes Act.

Section 2 relates to definitions.

Section 3 gives statutory authority to the President to seize war facilities—a power already exercised on several occasions under executive order or proclamation.

Sections 4 and 5 of the bill provide for maintaining existing terms and conditions of employment except as directed by the War Labor Board.

Section 6 makes it a criminal offense to instigate, direct or aid a strike in a Government-operated plant or mine.

This would make possible the arrest of a few leaders who would give bond for their appearance at trial. It would assure punishment for those found guilty, and might also have some deterrent effect. But it would not assure continuance of war production in the most critical emergencies.

Section 7 gives the National War Labor Board statutory authority and defines its powers.

Broadly speaking, these sections incorporate into statute the existing machinery for settling labor disputes. The penalties provided by the act do not detract from the moral sanctions of labor's no-strike pledge.

If the bill were limited to these seven sections, I would sign it.

But the bill contains other provisions which have no place in legislation to prevent strikes in wartime and which in fact would foment slowdowns and strikes.

I doubt whether the public generally are familiar with these provisions. I doubt whether the Congress had the opportunity fully to appraise the effects of these provisions upon war production.

Section 8 requires the representatives of employes of a war contractor to give notice of a labor dispute which threatens seriously to interrupt war production to the Secretary of Labor, the National War Labor Board and the National Labor Relations Board in order to give the employes the opportunity to express themselves by secret ballot whether they will permit such interruption of war production.

It would force a labor leader who is trying to prevent a strike in accordance with his no-strike pledge, to give the notice which would cause the taking of a strike ballot and might actually precipitate a strike.

In wartime we cannot sanction strikes with or without notice.

Value Doubtful

Section 8 further makes it mandatory that the National Labor Relations Board on the thirtieth day after the giving of the notice take a secret ballot among the employes in the "plants, mines, facilities, bargaining unit or bargaining units," as the case may be, on the question of whether they will stop work. This requirement would open the whole controversy over "bargaining units," a fruitful source of controversy and of bitter jurisdictional strife.

Section 8 ignores completely labor's "no strike" pledge and provides in effect for strike notices and strike ballots. Far from discouraging strikes these provisions would stimulate labor unrest and give Government sanction to strike agitations.

The 30 days allowed before the strike vote is taken under Government auspices might well become a boiling period instead of a cooling period. The thought and energies of the workers would be diverted from war production to vote-getting.

The heads of our military, naval and production agencies have testified that these provisions are likely to be subversive of the very purpose of the bill—uninterrupted production.

Section 9 of the bill prohibits for the period of the war political contributions by labor organizations. This provision obviously has no relevancy to a bill prohibiting strikes during the war in plants operated by the Government or to a "war labor disputes act." If there be merit in the prohibition, it should not be confined to wartime, and careful consideration should be given to the appropriateness of extending the prohibition to other nonprofit organizations.

Proposes Draft Extension

There should be no misunderstanding—I intend to use the powers of Government to prevent the interruption of war production by strikes. I shall approve legislation that will truly strengthen the hands of Government in dealing with such strikes, and will prevent the defiance of the National War Labor Board's decisions.

I recommend that the Selective Service Act be amended so that persons may be inducted into noncombat military service up to the age of 65 years. This will enable us to induct into military service all persons who engage in strikes or stoppages or other interruptions of work in plants in the possession of the United States.

This direct approach is necessary to insure the continuity of war work. The only alternative would be to extend the principle of Selective Service and make it universal in character.

I recognize that this bill has an entirely praiseworthy purpose to insure full war production. But I am convinced that section eight will produce strikes in vital war plants which otherwise would not occur. Therefore, I could not properly discharge the duties of my office if I were to approve S. 796.

The Gallup Poll

U. S. Favors Gradual Demobilization After War, Keeping Men in Service Until Jobs Open

Princeton, N. J., June 25.—One aspect of the postwar world which worrries many families is whether the men in the armed forces will be able to find jobs once they are demobilized.

It has been proposed that after peace comes the Army keep men in service until they are able to find civilian employment — in other words, that demobilization be a gradual process of fitting the soldiers back into the economic life of the Nation. This, of course, assumes that soldiers would be given extended leaves to seek jobs in the areas where they may want to work.

At the present time there is considerable public sentiment in favor of just such a process of gradual demobilization. A Nation-wide survey finds that even among families who have a member in the armed forces the dominant weight of sentiment is toward keeping soldiers in the service until such time as they can find definite employment.

To probe public opinion on the issue of postwar employment for soldiers the institute has just completed a survey in which voters from coast to coast were asked two questions.

The first was:

"Do you think the men in the armed forces will have trouble finding jobs when the war is over?"

Following is the vote of the general public, and also the attitude of those families who have a member in service at present:

General Public

Yes	56%
No	35
Don't know	9

Families With a Member in Armed Forces

Yes	55%
No	35
Don't know	10

The areas showing the least optimism were the South and the Rocky Mountain and Pacific Coast areas, where more than 60 per cent feel the homecoming soldiers will have trouble finding work.

The second issue covered in the survey was:

"Do you think men should be released from the armed forces after the war if they have no jobs, or should they be kept in service until they can show they have jobs?"

The vote is:

General Public

Release after war	38%
Kept in service till they find jobs	50
Undecided	12

Families With Members in Armed Forces

Released after war	41%
Kept in service till they find jobs	48
Undecided	11

Macks Hammer Leonard to Whip Nats, 5-2

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

Maybe the "smart money" knows best, but from a purely ringside viewpoint, those 7-to-5 odds they are quoting on Jackie Wilson to beat Lew Hanbury look like a very tempting overlay. In our private book, we think Hanbury ought to be the favorite when they clamber into the Griffith Stadium ring Monday night.

POVICH

In any event, it stacks up like a swell fight. Hanbury and Wilson are both busy guys in a ring. This is one they'd both like to win. Hansbury wants it because the big money is just beyond if he licks the likes of Wilson. The colored boy, who once held the N. B. A. featherweight title, is apt to be labeled a back-slider if he loses to a lad with a mere local reputation.

When Hanbury beat Frankie Callura a month ago under the Ahearn aegis, he was licking the featherweight champ, the man who had beaten Wilson twice. But he wasn't beating much of a fighter, at that. The mystery is how did Callura ever beat Wilson, even once? Certainly Wilson in his knockout of Danny Petro at the Stadium looked like a far better fighter than Callura, whose wild flailing made him look like a third-rate Petey Sarron.

Hanbury is by all odds the most interesting fighter ever produced in Washington rings, and he may go the farthest. He's no longer a local yokel to be fed to visiting big-shots with the result a foregone conclusion. Hanbury has class in the ring. That's not surprising. He's been fighting every since he was in his early teens.

Lew stepped out of the mere local boy class when he fought Callura and licked him last month. Callura tried to overpower him in the first two minutes with a bruising, two-fisted attack, and Hanbury was about as panicky as a cast-iron gargoyle. He weathered everything Callura threw, punched back smartly, and by the end of the round he was out-boxing Callura and winning the round.

Wilson's a smarter fighter than Callura, though. In fact, he's very smart. He was smart enough to grasp right at the start that he could hit Petro with a right hand whenever he wanted to throw one, and the urge was frequent. He stopped the sluggish Petro. A few weeks later, Wilson outpointed Jimmy Phillips and rarely threw a right hand. Against the fast-moving Phillips, he could never get set.

On Monday night, Hanbury will be an easier target than Phillips, but he'll be a more dangerous one. Wilson will have to take care. Hanbury's punches are something less than killing, but they can add up to a tremendous amount of damage. Lew likes to mix it. If Wilson wants it that way, he can have it.

For a lad who hasn't had as many as 25 professional fights, Hanbury is an amazing sort. Against Callura, he was making Callura look like the challenger and himself the champion. He knows how to protect himself in the clinches, the last thing a fighter usually learns, and he can deal out punishment inside.

Hanbury, at times, appears to be making a foolhardy fight with his willingness to stand up and swap punches, but he doesn't carry it to extremes. He's smart enough to retire and box when he's hurt. There's nothing very stylish about his boxing, but it's pretty good. He doesn't have Wilson's fancy footwork and clever tricks, but he gets along all right.

Lew will have a weight advantage over Wilson Monday night, and that shouldn't hurt him. He likes to bull the opposition around, anyway. Wilson will probably see a lot of the ropes, and will need his footwork to stall off the enthusiastic Hanbury.

How Hanbury will react against a smart fighter like Wilson would seem to be the nub of the gamble. He has demonstrated that he could take care of the rough-and-tumble type of Callura, but Wilson can be rough too. He is not rough obviously, but he can mess you up in the clinches with his head and butt you if you're not too careful, and he can hold and hit.

This one is the biggest fight Hanbury ever fought. He can shake the dust of Washington off his shoes and head for the Garden and big dough if he licks Wilson convincingly. We think he can do it.

Indians Sink Chisox, 6-2, With 8 Hits

Three-Run Splurge In First Inning RoutsWade; Curtright Hits in 21st Game

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, June 25.—The Cleveland Indians supported Southpaw Al Smith with an eight-hit attack tonight to whip the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 2, in a series opener.

The Chisox also hit safely eight times, although Smith kept the blows scattered, in winning his fifth victory against two defeats.

Cleveland fashioned the victory with a three-run splurge in the first inning that sent Jake Wade to the showers and brought Joe Haynes to the mound for Chicago.

The first three Indian batters filled the bases, as Oris Hockett and Manager Lou Boudreau walked, and Roy Cullenbine's sacrifice blow was muffed by Wade. Jeff Heath lined a long fly ball to left field, scoring Hockett, and after Ken Keltner was purposely passed, Buddy Rosar singled home Boudreau and Cullenbine, finishing Wade.

Another run in the fourth and two more in the seventh completed the Indian total, and the White Sox managed to score singly in the second and fifth.

Guy Curtright, Chisox left fielder, hit safely in the sixth to stretch to 21 his string of consecutive games in which he has made at least one hit.

Elmer Valo Beats Throw to Plate to Check in With Home Run

As a prelude of what was to come, Elmer Valo, Philadelphia rightfielder connected with Dutch Leonard's second pitch of the night, last night, at Griffith Stadium and drove it to the centerfield corner for a home run, although he had to slide desperately to beat the relay from Spence to Priddy, to Early, who dove—too late—to tag Elmer. The A's collected 13 hits off Leonard in seven innings to win, 5-2, as the Nats were restricted to six safeties by Orrie Arntzen. It was Leonard's sixth loss against five wins.

Athletics Slam Knuckle-Baller for 13 Safeties; Valo Clouts Hore Run

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

The A's had it last night. Better make that plural. They had a pitcher who could hold the Nats to six hits, a good bead on Dutch Leonard's knuckleball, a home-run hitter and a walloping good time. It all added up to a very sour evening for the Nats and their 14,500 customers.

By way of avenging some of the indignities they had suffered from the Nats this season, the Athletics pounded out 15 hits and a 5-2 victory over the Washington club under the Griffith Stadium lights.

They didn't waste much time. Outfielder Elmer Valo, the first man to face Leonard, hit Leonard's second pitch of the ball game for a home run into the center-field corner. After that, Leonard settled down and allowed only 11 singles and a two-bagger before he retired at the end of seven innings.

Former Bearded Hurler

The fellow who outpitched Leonard and threw confusion at the Nats was Rookie Orrie Arntzen, a big right-hander from Williamsport, Pa., who was a bearded pitcher for the House of David before he broke into organized baseball.

Arntzen struck out nine Nats, four in succession, with a fast ball that gave way to a curve in the later innings when the heat and humidity tempered his speed. He shut the Nats out in the last seven innings.

Leonard endured for seven innings only because Bob Johnson was playing left field like some guardian angel for the big knuckle baller. Johnson made spectacular catches off Jo-Jo White in the first and fourth innings with men on bases, else the A's might have scored in double figures.

Nats Even Count

After Leonard gave up two runs to the A's at the start, the Nats got them back for him at the end of the second inning, but with a 2-2 tie in his possession he pitched the ball game away.

The A's got their first run very simply. Valo simply swatted his homer and legged it home ahead of a relay from Gerry Priddy. They made it 2-0 later in the inning when Mayo beat out a hit to Sullivan and scored from first on Siebert's double to left.

Arntzen had a shaky first inning, walking Spence and Vernon in succession, Johnson immediately drove a run home with a single, but Early grounded out and Priddy struck out. In the second, Arntzen put the tying run on base with a walk, and was in deep trouble when Sullivan beat out a hit. Leonard sacrificed and Case got a run home with a long foul fly to left to tie the score.

In Complete Charge

The A's rookie was in complete charge thereafter. The Nats had only one chance to get back in the ball game, and muffed that. They filled the bases with two out on singles by Case and Vernon in the fifth, and Johnson's pass. In this emergency, Jake Early popped up.

Meanwhile Leonard gave up the winning runs in the third. Three straight hits were mixed up in the two tallies of the A's in that session, singles by Estalella, Siebert and Wagner. The second run scored when one of Leonard's knucklers eluded Early for a passed ball.

Siebert, the league's leading run producer, produced another run for the A's in the seventh with a single through the box after Mayo opened with a single and stole second. Haefner got the pitching job thereafter. He gave up no more runs, but the A's needed no more.

Yankees Tied By Bosox, 2-2, In 11 Innings

By the Associated Press

Boston, June 25.—The Boston Red Sox and New York Yankees battled to a 2-2 tie at Fenway Park today. The game, a twilight affair, was called at the end of the eleventh because of darkness.

Despite the fact that he batted out of order and cost his Yankee teammates a run earlier in the game, Joe Gordon redeemed himself in the ninth as he blasted out a home run which enabled the New Yorkers to tie the Boston Red Sox.

The twilight encounter, halted because of darkness, drew 6206 fans.

The "Gordon incident" occurred in the third after Lindell had singled and Nick Etten scored him from second with a base knock.

With two away Gordon bounced one off the wall to put Ttten across, but Manager Joe Cronin called Umpire Bill Stewart's attention to the fact that Hemsley should have batted ahead of Gordon, whereupon Stewart called the third out and canceled Etten's run.

Boston's tallies came in the third when Lake walked and scored on Pete Fox's single, and in the sixth when Culberson was pasesd and rode in under Bobby Doerr's smash off third base.

Frick Considers Giant Protest On Philly Game

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—President Ford Frick of the National League today heard evidence on the New York Giants' protest of their June 3d game with Phillies at the Polo Grounds and indicated he would not hand down a decision for a couple of days.

The protest came on Manager Mel Ott's claim that Babe Dahlgren of the Phillies should have been out when he walked into one of Ken Trinkle's pitches in the ninth inning. Umpire 'Beans' Reardon ruled, however, that it was "no pitch" and permitted Dahlgren to remain at bat. Dahlgren then blasted out a three-run double that gave the Phillies the game.

Representing the Phillies at the hearing were, Owner William Cox, Manager Bucky Harris, Coach Earl Whitehill and Dahlgren. Ott and Reardon also presented their sides of the argument.

Bithorn Shuts Out St. Louis With Two Hits for 4th Win; Also Bangs Double

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—Hi Bithorn, the Chicago Cubs' Puerto Rican right-hander, shut out the St. Louis Cardinals with two hits, 6 to 0, tonight for his fourth victory over the world champions this season. A crowd of 6620 saw the game, the first twilight contest ever played at Wrigley Field.

The Cubs made seven hits off a quartet of Redbird pitchers, but needed only two of them, both singles, for pairs of runs in the first and third that kayoed Starter Ernie White.

Chicubs Score Twice

White walked the first two batters in the first and Phil Cavarretta's single and Bill Nicholson's fly converted them. Ed Stanky's scratch hit, a hit batter, Johnny Hopp's throwing error, a pass by Reliever Harry Brecheen and a fly added two more runs in the third. Bithorn's own double led to another run off Brecheen in the fourth, and the big hurler singled in the sixth run off Murray Dickson after Lenny Merullo tripled in the same inning.

Occupation Wins In Camera Finish Over Slide Rule

By the Associated Press

Chicago, June 25.—The sensational Occupation, the Nation's 1942 juvenile money winning champion, successfully continued his quest for 3-year-old honors today by turning back Slide Rule, owned by W. E. Boeing, Seattle airplane manufacturer, in a sizzling stretch tussle for a $2500 purse over seven furlongs at Washington Park.

The finish was so close it required a camera decision. Valdina Farm's Valdina Sol trailed Slide Rule by 2¼ lengths, while the Walmac Farm's The Native was a distant fourth and last in this sprint for 3-year-olds. The time was 1:24 1-5.

Occupation, owned by John Marsch, Chicago contractor, went to post at odds on and returned $3.40 to win and $2.40 to place. The place price on Slide Rule was $3. It was Occupation's second start of the season, both of which he won.

Home Runs Aid Browns to Beat Tigers, 6 to 3

By International News Service

St. Louis, June 25.—The St. Louis Browns dropped the Detroit Tigers to fifth place in the American League standings tonight as Denny Galehouse scattered 11 hits for a 6 to 3 triumph and his fifth win of the season.

Home runs by Vernon Stephens and Mike Chartak were the big blows in the Browns' seven hit attack against Dizzy Trout and Tommy Bridges as Detroit blew a 3-to-0 lead.

The Tigers scored runs in the first, second and fourth innings before Stephens' hit his ninth homer of the season with Don Gutteridge on base in the last of the fourth. The Browns moved ahead in the fifth as Milt Byrnes and Chet Laabs scored on an infield out and Joe Schultz's infield hit. Chartak's sixth homer of the year in the eighth with Stephens on base sewed up the verdict.

Segura Gains Tennis Finals With Brown

By the Associated Press

Evanston, Ill., June 25.—Francisco (Pancho) Segura of Miami University won his critical semi-final match from Earl Cochell today, blasting the Southern Californian in straight sets, 6—3, 6—3, 6—0, to advance to tomorrow's finals of the National Collegiate Athletic Association tennis championships.

Cochell, considered the most formidable barrier to the title march of the little Ecuador player in the N. C. A. A. meet, played at a vigorous offensive pace in the first set but after holding a 2—2 deadlock he wilted and Pancho rolled off with a 6—3 triumph.

The Southern Californian came back hard in the second set and won the first two games. Then Segura, using a tantalizing drop shot and following up his advantage with steaming drives when Cochell came in to return the ball, packed away five consecutive games, dropped the next and then put over the clincher.

Cochell scored only eight points in being shut out in the third set.

Segura's finalist opponent tomorrow will be Tom Brown, jr., of California, the meet's second seeded player, who defeated Jimmy Evert of Notre Dame, 6—2, 4—6, 6—3, 6—4.

Sharkey to Meet Koverly on Mat

Babe Sharkey, the 235-pound 6-foot-3 Texan, yesterday was signed to wrestle George (K. O.) Koverly of Hollywood, in the feature match at Turner's Arena Wednesday night.

Sharkey is fast moving into the ranks of the top rough men of the East. He has engaged in three no-contest matches in as many weeks. Last Wednesday, the referee disqualified him in his bout with Abe Yourist and the match first was declared no-contest.

Braves Rout Chase, Beat Giants, 5-3

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—With the Boston Braves pounding out 14 hits for a 5-to-3 victory, the New York Giants dropped right back into their losing ways today for their sixth defeat in their last seven trips to the post.

Ken Chase, still striving to win his first National League game, was pounded from the mound with a four-run blast in the fifth as the Braves broke a 1-1 deadlock that had existed since the third frame when Charley Workman hit a homer. Dick Bartell put the Giants in front with a circuit drive in the first.

Harry Feldman relieved Chase in the fifth and checked Casey Stengel's men the remainder of the way but the Giants could do little with Nate Andrews as he chalked up his seventh success of the season. They picked up a run in the seventh and added another in the ninth on Mel Ott's eighth homer.

Winner Was Stopping At Finish; Celtic Knight Is Third, Daily Double $14.60

By Walter Haight
A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., June 25.—As usual, the annual running of the James Sager Purse, named for the popular Washington sportsman, proved a thriller. Mrs. J. H. Elliott's War Smoke was stopping and Carl Wedell's Bear Cat was closing fast at the end of the test of about 7 furlongs.

The judges figured that War Smoke had lasted and failed to consult the camera, although chartmakers called the margin a head. Raymond Holland's Celtic Knight was third in the field of six. The crowd installed War Smoke the favorite, and the 5-year-old daughter of Constitution and Fire Bird paid $5.40. She was clocked in 1:27 over a fast track.

Apprentice Jockey R. Fitzgerald sent War Smoke to the top at the clubhouse turn, the mare shaking off Sir Chicle. Approaching the stretch, Bear Cat came through on the inside and then swung out. In the final drive, Bear Cat, handled by Jockey Carson Kirk, was cutting down War Smoke's advantage at every jump.

A small army of backers collected a $14.60 mutuel in the daily double. J. L. Friedman's 10-year-old Chancer won the first race by a scant nose under handling by Jockey Sammy Palumbo. Frank Beuhler's Revelry was second and the Eastview Stable's Volume was third. Jockey George (Pappy) Witmer, who rode Revelry, was fined $25 far carrying Chancer wide entering the stretch.

The second race went to E. Curry's Distant Star, strongly ridden by Jockey Stanley Austin. Mrs. M. E. Whitney's Spikery was second witht Half Inch third. Distant Star paid $5.80.

The fastest time of the afternoon was registered by C. E. Bringing's Marandan. The 6-year-old mare won the seventh race and went the 4½ furlongs in 0:49 2/5. Highformation and Chat Hopkins followed the winner to the wire. Maranden paid $7.40.

Selections at Charles Town

Dear Al:

Jockey Patsy Grant was rejected by the Army and will resume riding here today. Injuries, particularly those to his ankles, suffered in falls, caused the doctors to frown on him. Jockey Al Bocson was shipped to Fort Knox, Ky., for further examination. Spooks Gracey, agent for the Goss stable, and Porky Tumblin, exercise boy, made the Army grade and they are happy about it. Lloyd S. Stewart of Washington, D. C., is doing O. K. with his string of horses under the wing of Huppy Davis. By the way, Huppy, the horse, was sound as a bell of brass when Davis gave him away as a riding horse last summer. Alan Clarke is busy legging up his horses for the Garden State Park meeting. The present dry spell is one of the longest since this track opened 10 years ago. Trainers with mudders have been scanning the skies in vain. This should be just enough to bring on a rain storm. Trainer A. F. Wood will ship Doctor's Nurse, Returned, Weatherite, Trapping, Bill's Anne and Outlet to Toledo. John Michael McDonald, a race-trackeer for years, died here at 75 years of age. He was known as "Handicapper" and used to heckle me particularly at Bowie. He worked for Jim Arthur at one time. Interment will be in Richmond, Va. See you on the rail.

BILL.

First race—ROLLS ROUGH prefers an off track but has speed and will be hard to whip regardless of conditions. BRAXTON showed speed in that first out here and is dangerous. SEASONAL to take care of the others.

Second race—MISS UPSTART'S last was impressive. She deserved the call in this. INDIAN SEA gets in light and may surprise. IDLE NIGHT has a poor post position but is a threat.

Third race—STRANA gets the rail position and may make the most of it to beat these. REMOLEE would be better suited on an off track but is fit. LENA GIRL for the show end.

Fourth race—MISTAKE gets my call in this rather open affair. BARRACA'S last was excellent. OYSTER BAR has shown speed and should be along in time to take part of the money.

Fifth race—CHIEF TEDDY is in rare form and I'm forced to go along with this much improved plater. LIGHT TIDE figures with these. FLAG ETTA for the minor money.

Sixth race—The Sowers and Strother forces clash in this. SARAN and NAVY are the big guns and I look for them to finish one, two. VENDOR'S LIEN might take a piece of the money.

Seventh race—ELECTRIC has speed enough to beat these to the first turn and will have to be caught. DIVIDEND comes from the hard-knocking Feltner barn. ROUGH EGG to show.

Eighth race—UPSETTING is the class here and I see no reason for mistakes. CHRONOS and PURPORT for the place and show. Best bet—MISTAKE.

Whirly Favorite For Equipoise Stake Today

Chicago, June 25 (INS).—Whirlaway, the turf's greatest money-winner, was held at 8 to 5 in the wagering tonight, to take the $10,000 Equipoise mile tomorrow, the feature race of the Arlington Park program at Washington Park.

The Warren Wright horse, which this week ran third in a mile race, his 1943 debut, was allotted 126 pounds for tomorrow's test. Conceding from 8 to 22 pounds to the 16 other possible starters.

Best Seller, winner of the Equipoise mile last year, will have a go at it again tomorrow. The horse was held at 12 to 1.

Rounders, with a decision over the great Whirly; Marriage, Thumbs Up and King's Abbey were 8 to 1 in the overnight line.

Whitney Entry Favorite for Brooklyn 'Cap

By the Associated Press

New York, June 25.—Don Bingo, surprise winner of the Suburban Handicap at Belmont Park, is going to try to make it stick tomorrow when he opposes the same field in the $30,000 added Brooklyn Handicap at Aqueduct, a mile and one-quarter race first run in 1887.

The South American-bred 4-year-old, owned by the Binglin Stable of Crooner Bing Crosby and Lin Howard, won the Suburban by three lengths under 104 pounds in the fast time of 2:01 2/5. Tomorrow, however, he'll be asked to pack 113 pounds over the same distance and that added weight may produce a different finish.

Arrayed against him will be Lou Tufano's Market Wise, disqualified out of second money in the Suburban; William Helis' Attention, who moved up to second through the disqualification and Mrs. Payne Whitney's hard hitting combination of Shut Out and Devil Diver.

The prerace betting line quoted Mrs. Whitney's entry, which also includes The Rhymer, as the 8 to 5 favorite with Market Wise held at 5 to 2; Attention and his running-mate, Salto, at 8 to 1; Don Bingo also at 8 to 1 and William Woodward's route running pair of Trierarch and Vagrancy at 5 to 1.

Wills to Meet Rosa In Semifinal Monday

Frankie Wills, District welterweight champion, who hit the comeback trail last week in Richmond with a convincing 10-round victory over Jerry Fiorello, hard-hitting New Yorker, will meet Manuel Rosa, Baltimore Negro, in a special eight-round semifinal to the Lew Hanbury-Jackie Wilson 10-rounder at Griffith Stadium Monday night, Promoter Goldie Ahearn announced yesterday.

Wills has not fought here since the indoor season three months ago when he lost to R. J. Lewis, an unknown Negro from Denver, just when the D. C. scrapper was in line for a possible shot at Henry Armstrong. Not until after the fight did Wills reveal he had been ill. His showing last week in Richmond against the highly regarded Fiorello convinced his managers, "Bo" Bregman and Bob Hayden, he once more is in the shape that saw him whip the ears off Al (Bummy) Davis last winter at Turner's Arena. Wills fought Rosa here before, earning a close 8-round decision.

Meanwhile, Jackie Wilson remained in New York for another day of training under the eyes of Pete "Silver Fox" Riley, preferring to box with Chalky Wright than with any Washington talent, whom he does not regard very highly as sparring partners. He arrived here last night. He will workout at Apollo gym at 2 p. m. today.

Hanbury wound up his hard training licks at the Merrick Boys' Club gym with "Pop" Hanbury, his adviser, Trainer Lou Jamieson and his manager, Al Weill, agreed that he was in the best shape of his career and decided to ease up for Saturday and Sunday. Lew will do only road work and loosening up exercises between now and 10 p. m. Monday.

The bout, incidentally appears to be one of the biggest betting fights here since Henry Lamar and Marty Gallagher traded punches more than a decade ago, is expected to draw between $15,000 and $20,000. Lew Hanbury, sr., incidentally, snorted indignantly at press stories that Wilson was rated a 6 and 7 to 5 favorite, and announced he would like to wager $1300 at those figures.

Church Conferences to Attract Hundreds of Leaders to Campuses in Area

Methodists, Presbyterians Are Meeting

REV. F. B. GILLESPIE,
Pastor of Lewinsville, Va., Presbyterian Church, among leaders of Presbyterian youth parley opening today at Hood College

Summer religious conferences will draw several hundred churchmen to nearby college campuses this weekend and in the coming week.

The fourth annual young adult assembly of the Baltimore Methodist Conference opened last night at Western Maryland College, Westminster. The annual conference of young people of high school and college age opens today at Hood College, continuing for a week, sponsored by the Washington City Presbytery.

Because of war conditions the Hood College parley is meeting jointly this year, but the two age groups will have separate programs.

The Rev. D. Hobart Evans, pastor of Hyattsville Presbyterian Church, is dean of the Presbyterian parley, and instructors will be the Rev. Richard Mussen, pastor of Sherwood Presbyterian Church here, and Charles Dockendorff of Riverdale Presbyterian Church, president of the Washington City Presbytery's youth group. The Rev. Franklin Brown Gillespie, pastor of Lewinsville (Va.) Presbyterian Church, in charge of youth work for the Washington City Presbytery, will preach tomorrow at 11 a. m. at the conference's worship service. The Rev. Russell Galloway of Wilmington, Del., will address the daily vespers at 7 p. m.

Boris Shiskin, American Federation of Labor economist, addressed last night's opening sessions at Western Maryland, discussing the relationship between labor and the church. Dr. Robert M. Williams, pastor of Asbury Methodist Church, Eleventh and K Streets Northwest, Washington, speaks today on "Christianity and World Brotherhood."

Dr. J. Earl Moreland, president of Randolph-Macon College, Ashland, Va.; Dr. M. Leo Rippy, director of Christian education for adults, the Methodist Church; Walter A. Graham, Baltimore Conference director of young adults, and others are taking part.

Awakening Sought

Peace Plans Need Support Of Laymen

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Church Editor

One of the hoped-for outcomes of the recent regional conference on a just and durable peace at Hood College, Frederick, Md., will be an awakening of the individual church member to the need of his solid support of postwar peace plans.

Following the parley a prominent church leader ventured the opinion that the rank and file of churchmen are not thinking so seriously about postwar plans as are their pastors and other leaders. This reverses what happened after World War 1, he said, when the leaders failed the people. Are the people going to fail the leaders this time? We hope not.

To help the average churchman to "know the score" on peace plans, the conference's findings are being used as a basis of special study in many Protestant churches of the Maryland-District-Delaware area. The findings stress the economic, political, social and religious bases of a lasting peace.

It was significant that the Hood College parley, sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches and the Maryland-Delaware Council of Churches and Christian Education, opened its sessions on June 16—the same day when House bipartisan support swung behind the House Foreign Affairs Committee's "lasting peace" resolution. Equally important, one of the resolutions adopted at the Hood conference indorsed that resolution.

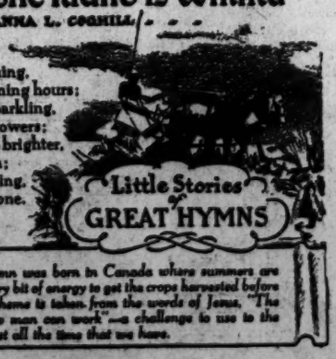
"WORK, FOR THE NIGHT IS COMING"

ANNA L. COUSHILL



Work, for the night is coming,
Work through the morning hours;
Work while the dew is sparkling,
Work 'mid springing flowers;
Work while the day grows brighter,
Under the glowing sun;
Work, for the night is coming,

Little Stories of GREAT HYMNS

The author of this hymn was born in Canada where summers are short and call forth every bit of energy to get the crops harvested before the early frosts. The theme is taken from the words of Jesus, "The night cometh when no man can work"—a challenge to use to the utmost all the time that we have.

Sherwood Church Girls' Class Sends Cookies to Servicemen

Latest wrinkle in church youth groups' work for their service men is that of a girls' class at Sherwood Presbyterian Church, Twenty-second Street and Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, whose boxes of cookies leave each week for the camps.

The girls, headed by Class President Margaret Anne Putman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Putman of 2955 Carlton Avenue Northeast, since last September, have baked and sent 1900 boxes of cookies, popcorn and hard candy to their friends from the congregation in the service.

One lad wrote:

"I am certainly glad there are only 30 of us here because if there had been many more in the stampede someone might have been hurt. I managed to eat a few before the rush, but three minutes after the discovery that "Glidden" had cookies, they left us with an empty box, save for three raisins and some crumbs."

The lesson- sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "It is possible—yea, it is the duty and privilege of every child, man, and woman—to follow in some degree the example of the Master by the demonstration of Truth and Life, of health and holiness." The Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

Former Justice Jimmy Byrnes has been and still is extremely popular on Capitol Hill. Long years in the House of Representatives, then in the Senate make him understand the congressional point of view.

Early this week, however, Jimmy got a friendly but pointed going-over from some of his former colleagues. The incident was significant because it points the finger at one sore spot on the home front—bickering among high officials.

Two weeks ago the Assistant President roused the ire of the Truman Committee by urging publicly that Congress cut out a lot of its investigations. The Truman Committee has done a painstaking and statesmanlike job of investigation, and when some of its members resented Byrnes' statement, he sent word that they could come down to the White House and talk to him.

They sent word back that he was quite familiar with the street-car lines to Capitol Hill, and he could come up and talk to them.

This impasse ended in a compromise. Byrnes finally came up to the Senate, but as the luncheon guest of the Truman Committee. The session, although friendly, got a bit hot when Byrnes was asked why he was opposed to senatorial investigations.

Who Confuses Most?

He replied that investigations left the public confused and went on to explain in some detail how the public heard one side state its case at Truman Committee investigations, then the other side, until they didn't know which side to believe.

"It all makes for confusion," concluded Jimmy.

"Confusion," snorted Senator Brewster of Maine. "I would like to know who is causing the confusion around here?" When the Undersecretary of War makes a public statement that we don't have enough high octane gasoline and must curtail rubber; and then the rubber czar, Mr. Jeffers, calls him a damn liar, just who is the poor public to believe? Who created the confusion in that case? And who was it who finally brought the Undersecretary of War and Mr. Jeffers up here and knocked their heads together? The Truman Committee.

"And what kind of confusion results," continued Brewster, "when Chester Davis, who is supposed to know all there is to be known about food, comes out and says that his way is the way to handle food, while Prentiss Brown and the White House say he's wrong? Did the Truman Committee or the Administration cause that confusion?

"And what about the millions the Army is spending on camouflaging these (censored) war plants, painting them all up with the most intricate and expensive camouflage, and then putting barrage balloons over them so the enemy will know right where they are? Did we create that confusion?"

"Also what about our investigation of the Wright Aeronautical engine plant at Cincinnati?" interposed Senator Kilgore of West Virginia, another Democrat. "The Truman Committee caused no confusion there. We investigated the thing very quietly, said absolutely nothing to the public, and even issued a reassuring statement to the public at the request of the War Department when the story leaked to the press."

The debate continued all during the lunch hour. Jimmy Byrnes smiled and took it. But at the end there was no doubt about whether Congress would continue with its investigations.

Humane Bombing

Strange as it may seem, the United States Air Forces are planning the humane bombing of Germany. They want to avoid killing people and destroying nonmilitary buildings They want to bring the war to a merciful ending.

High ranking officers of the Air Forces are urging that we conduct our bombing operations in such a way that unnecessary destruction of enemy life and property shall be held to a minimum.

This is part of their thesis in favor of precision, or "pinpoint" bombing, as contrasted with the "area" bombing of the R. A. F. The precision bombing, carried on in daylight, is able to pick out the precise military target, and destroy that without laying waste to an entire city, or killing helpless civilians.

These Air Forces officers speak of the postwar attitude of nations toward each other, emphasizing that careless bombing would intensify the hatreds of war, and make it more difficult to build a peaceful world.

Somebody will have to rebuild the broken cities of Europe. World ties are now so close that no great areas of destruction can be allowed to remain; rebuilding will have to be done, and only the victors will have the power to do the work.

Therefore, say these exponents of precision bombing, let us have no indiscriminate bombing, but only a precision job, which spares the life and property of the enemy as much as possible.

Congress In Deadlock Over Pay Bill

Post Staff Writer

With Senate and House deadlocked in violent disagreement over the justice of separating three Government employes from the payroll, Congress yesterday still could not pass the 143-million-dollar Urgent Deficiency bill even though by this controversy the legislators have tied up their own funds so they cannot meet congressional payrolls by June 30.

Representative Cannon (Democrat) of Missouri, chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee left a meeting of Senate and House conferees late yesterday declaring that the failure of Congress to act threatened to "practically wreck the Government credit."

Army, Navy Workers Safe

The deadlock prevents payment of overtime to all Federal employes except those in the Army and Navy Departments; it has already given 4076 District employes a payless payday, and threatens 8600 more with a similar fate, and to cap the climax it will leave every single congressional employe, from custodial workers to doorkeepers payless.

Although thousands of Federal employes have already missed overtime, they have received their regular salaries.

Congress, however, has created a situation for itself which will prevent its own clerks, secretaries and even Capitol policemen from receiving one cent of their pay.

Anticipating that a deficiency bill would be passed Congress paid all recent pay raises it voted this spring to its employes out of regular pay funds, leaving the cupboard bare at this moment.

Teachers Unpaid

The 3500 school teachers in the District who could not be paid anything yesterday, even though many urged their needs of funds for summer school training, are in exactly the same position. They get nothing either. Neither do 1206 custodial employes.

Cannon, irate at the situation, said the House had offered the Senate "a proposition—a very complicated proposition—yesterday" and said that conferees would meet again today to straighten out the mess.

Asserting that the situation is "ridiculous," Cannon nevertheless insisted that the responsibility lay with the Senate for "all this trouble."

Cannon said according to Congressional precedents the House which made the first amendment had the responsibility of making a move in a deadlock. He said the first amendment was made by the Senate when it adopted an amendment by a vote of 69-0 rejecting a rider in the bill forbidding payment to three Government employes.

Says House Won't Recede

The House Committee chairman indicated strongly that the House conferees did not plan to recede from the position the House took when it voted 318 to 62 to forbid salary payments to Robert Morss Lovett, Government secretary for the Virgin Islands, and Goodwin B. Watson and William E. Dodd, jr., employes of the Federal Communications Commission.

The Senate by a vote of 52 to 17 sent the issue straight back to conference.

Cleveland Heights Gardens Real Success, Residents Say

Mrs. W. N. Brown, Project Chairman, Has Canned Stock

"We fought the Japanese beetle, and we won!" Mrs. W. N. Brown, 3420 Newark Street Northwest, a victory gardener in the Cleveland Heights area, said yesterday when asked about crops.

In fact, Mrs. Brown, who gardens in her backyard and is chairman of the community project for her area, hasn't bought any fresh vegetables this spring. She has been using peas, kale, beets, string beans, swiss chard, radishes, lettuce and onions of her own growing. And she has been canning string beans.

Mrs. Brown is not alone. Mrs. T. H. Miller, 3504 Thirty-sixth Street Northwest, has grown all of her own vegetables this spring and also cans beans.

Beauty Cultivated

Indeed, all over the District acres of bearing plants add a cultivated beauty to the landscape, while their fruits are adding to owners' dinner spreads.

Artie Ford, 73 Bates Street Northwest, who with his 13-year-old son, Bill, cultivates three 50 by 100 foot plots at River Terrace along the Anacostia River, still feasts off goods canned from his last year's planting, says Bill. But the fresh food is tasting good now, too.

The two were out yesterday to put in 24 tomato plants in space left bare by some sweet potato failures. Conservation of space is important, Bill's dad thinks. While there they picked a family dish of green beans for mother and three younger Fords.

The Ivy Belote family who live out where the tall corn grows, 2811 Mills Avenue Northeast, and whose son gets pilot's wings next month at Blytheville, Ark., are feasting on food Mr. Belote and his neighbors grow in the 1½-acre plot behind his house.

Corn 7 Feet Tall

The tall corn, now a good 7 feet high and purple tasseled, was put in early in April by Cary Brenchfield, one of the four neighbors who joined Belote in paying $5 each to have the area plowed and are now reaping their harvests. Formerly, Belote said, he spent $20 a year just to keep the weeds cut down.

One Washington area reports very little yet ready to harvest. At Foxhall where trouble was had getting a plow, most plantings are still at the anticipation stage.

At the plot back of Gallinger Hospital, however, Robert L. Davids, 242 Eighth Street Southeast, and his coworkers have defied ravages of boyish vandalism to bring their plots to the yielding stage—almost miraculously, says J. Morton Franklin, head of the District victory garden supervisers. Following counsel of the victory garden officer, recovery has been magnificent, Franklin said yesterday.

Lutherans Plan Center to Aid Service Groups

An office building at 1408 H Street Northwest, soon may be obtained for housing a Lutheran Service Center for men and women in uniform, it was indicated here yesterday.

Dr. N. M. Ylvisaker, director of service centers for the National Lutheran Council and president of the Chaplain's Association of the Army and Navy, told a Lutheran laymen's luncheon when he returns to Chicago this weekend he will recommend to the National Lutheran Council that the H Street property be obtained for the center.

The council is now operating 20 centers near Army camps and naval bases, the projects being open to servicemen and servicewomen of all faiths.

Most of the centers are of the "home away from home" variety, consisting of reading rooms, writing desks, lodging, recreation and worship facilities.

Dr. Ylvisaker, speaking at Schneider's Cafe, near Eleventh and E Streets Northwest, was introduced by the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Memorial Church, and chairman of Lutheran World Action for the United Lutheran Church. The service centers are a World Action project, for which a drive is now in progress to raise one million dollars.

Carnival Monkey Bites Boy on Legs

Health Group Reports on Seal Funds

Education Program Costs $10,284 of $80,000 Raised In Yule Campaign

The District of Columbia Tuberculosis Association released its annual report yesterday disclosing how $80,000, given through purchase of Christmas seals by 7500 members had been spent during the past year.

Paul D. Sleeper, president of the association, explained that the report was compiled on work accomplished under the presidency of Dr. J. Winthrop Peabody and before the resignation in April of Harald H. Lund, executive secretary. At the present time, the board of directors is seeking a successor to Lund before planning a program for the coming year.

The educational program, including distribution of leaflets, posters, talks and motion pictures on prevention and treatment of tuberculosis, cost the association $10,284.57.

$2560.18 for Case Finding

During the same period, the association allocated $2560.18 for finding cases of tuberculosis. This was accomplished through cooperation with other medical agencies. A specialized placement worker in tuberculosis was provided for the Government Bureau of Vocational Rehabilitation and a rehabilitation specialist was placed at Glenn Dale Sanatorium, costing a total of $6053.34 for the year.

Statistical studies were started to determine the areas where tuberculosis was most prevalent and figures were compiled to find out the age, sex and racial groups needing the greatest attention. These activities were carried on in cooperation with the Health Department. The association also participated in the medical research program of the National Tuberculosis Association. These activities cost $3250.21.

Office Costs $13,349.85

In the field of medical social service for hospital patients, the organization cooperated with Howard University and Freedmen's Hospital to provide counsel for tuberculosis victims at a cost of $2155. Other cooperative projects, including support of the national tuberculosis program, cost $4292.26.

The report stated that $14,626.45 was paid out during the Christmas seal campaign. This included 100,000 letters and envelopes, 24 million seals, printing, special distribution, postage and additional employes needed for the fund-raising campaign, Sleeper explained. The cost of the office at 1601 Eighteenth Street Northwest, paid officials of the association and other administrative expenses, totaled $13,349.85.

Stimson-Backed Nursery Bill Reported Out by Committee

With the indorsement of the War Department a bill to provide care for children of mothers employed in war areas was reported favorably yesterday by the Senate Committee on Education and Labor, and is expected to reach the Senate floor early next week.

The War Department' advocacy of the measure was voiced in a letter to Senator Thomas (Democrat) of Utah, committee chairman from Secretary Stimson, who declared enactment of this ligislation "would be of material aid in solving a most difficult war production problem as well as contributing to improvement in civilian morale."

Stimson said he had not consulted the President in making his recommendation, but the bill received indirect approbation from President Roosevelt last Tuesday in a letter to the American Association of University Women, one of the groups backing the measure.

"I am glad to know that you concur in the proposal to develop these wartime services through full utilization of the resources of existing agencies concerned with the education, welfare and health of children," Roosevelt informed the A. A. U. W.

"It is apparent that the manpower situation in many American communities has become critical and has necessitated the bringing into the working force millions of women who ordinarily are full-time housewives. There are already at work in war plants several million such workers, and war production objectives indicate that women will be required during the next year. I am informed that by and large the supply of unmarried women has been exhausted and married women with children are, in many communities, urgently needed in war industry.

"One of the foremost limitations on the possibility of recruiting large numbers of such women into the labor force is the inability of such women, while they are away from home, to provide adequate care for their children, due to the fact that in crowded production centers there is a stringent shortage of domestic help. Women are reluctant to take jobs in industry if it results in the neglect of their children. In addition to the recruitment problem, the inability of women to find appropriate means of child-care is resulting in an otherwise unnecessarily high rate of absenteeism in war industries, it is reported."

The measure places responsibility for child care, after-school care and counselling service in the hands of the Federal Security Agency, the Children's Bureau, the Office of Education and the United States Public Health Service on a national basis. In the States the Federal agencies work through the State departments of education and welfare. The bill appropriates 20 million dollars annually for the duration to maintain the project, with half the expense, in most cases, to be borne by the States.

D. C. Policeman's Slayer Sentenced To 20 Years

Willie Bullock, 43-year-old Negro who once was sentenced to be electrocuted but whose conviction was set aside in 1941 by the United States Court of Appeals, was sentenced by District Court Justice Matthew F. McGuire yesterday to serve 20 years in jail for the fatal shooting of Policeman George W. Shinault in 1932.

At that time it was testified Bullock had placed a revolver in the mouth of a Negro woman. When Shinault interfered Bullock turned the gun on him, testimony showed.

Bullock was originally convicted in 1940 of murder in the first degree. But in June, 1941, the United States Court of Appeals reversed the conviction on the ground that the prosecutor had not proven premeditation.

Blackout Violators Convicted

Municipal Court Judge Walter J. Casey found three persons guilty yesterday of violating blackout regulations Wednesday. Two of the defendants received suspended sentences while another man was fined $5.

Engineer Corps Dance

The Army Engineer Corps will celebrate its 168th anniversary with a dance today at 9 p. m. in the Statler Hotel, it was announced yesterday.

Honored guests will include Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, Lieutenant General Sommervel, Maj. Gen. Eugene Reybold, chief of engineers, and John Martin, administrative assistant to the Secretary of War.

Scouts to Aid OWI

District Boy Scouts today are to take over the duties of official messengers to the Office of War Information. They will deliver posters to stores in their neighborhoods, in Washington and 14 nearby counties supplied by the OWI. Employed will be 260 scouts from Washington and Virginia and they will distribute 6490 posters.

Other posters will be delivered two weeks from today. The boys have been given the title of Scout Dispatch Bearers.

Higher Prices Needed, Says Laundryman

Claiming the "job freeze" question before the War Manpower Commission cannot save the collapse of the laundry industry unless prices paid employes are raised through raising laundry costs, one laundryman yesterday called the freeze "a farce."

Samuel Gandler, who manages two laundries, one on Ninth and the other on North Capitol Street, said: "This laundry situation was brought about because laundries failed to make any provisions whatever for arranging a fair price for labor. No doubt the OPA would have made provision if it had been taken up by the laundries themselves."

Claims Depression Price

"The 7-cent sheet is a depression price," continued Gandler. "We are selling laundry at depression prices. A slight increase would help a lot." These prices keep the employer from paying a satisfactory wage, he declared, adding that "when we pay a price that is good, the workers will stay on the job and not quit on the least pretext, go to another laundry, or stay away from the job."

"The job freeze will not help us," Gandler said. "The attitude of workmen here is that "you can take a horse to water but you can't make him drink." We are not afraid of the competition the housewife will give by doing some of her own laundry. Due to cheap prices they are putting everything in the laundry bag but the wallpaper so we must refuse new customers and furthermore are unable to complete orders on time. Eliminate the excess laundry and there still will be enough business."

Contrasted to Gandler's opinion was that of David Galkin, manager of the Blue Ribbon Laundry, who declared: "What we need is a freeze order that has some teeth in it. Workers figure that when help is so scarce they can stay out as much as they wish. If an employer chides them, they walk right out and take a job at another laundry. Some of our piece-workers never have earned so much in their lives, yet they feel free to take one or two days off at a time whenever they feel like it."

Laundries Considered Essential

Laundries in war industry areas, including Washington, are classified as essential but it is complained this does not keep employes on the job.

In answer to a suggestion that some of those thousands who have applied for jobs at the United States Employment Agency in the District would be used by the laundries, K. Vernon Banta, director of the service, told The Post yesterday afternoon that only a portion of that number—nearly 8000 applicants—come in the unskilled and semiskilled categories from which the laundries might draw.

"Practically none of these," said Banta, "were ready to take the floor wage" of 32.9 cents per hour for laundries to start with according to the rate set last fall. And no laundry employer has said that he could pay the figure offered by the War Manpower Commission's regional director in Philadelphia, who declared that any pay under 50 cents an hour was substandard in 27 war-industry areas, including Washington.

Church To Operate School Again

Registration Starts Monday to Relieve Neighborhoods of Juvenile Problems

A vacation school, designed to instruct children of the neighborhood and provide at the same time recreation, in order to help meet the problems of juvenile delinquency, will be conducted again this summer by the Rev. Dr. John K. Cartwright, pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, N and Eighth Streets Northwest, he announced yesterday.

The school is planned so that the morning hours are devoted to useful studies, mixed with some play, and the afternoon solely to recreation. The school is open without charge to children of all denominations.

Registration for the boys and girls will be held Monday between the hours of 9 and 11 a. m. at the boys' school hall.

The children are grouped according to ages. The school was started last year by Father Cartwright.

The program will include:

Spiritual: Commandments of God, character formation.

Cultural: Dramatic presentation, reading, spelling quizzes, history quizzes, geography quizzes, etiquette, art, nature study.

Vocational: Vocational guidance, sketching, Red Cross work.

Recreational program: Ping pong, softball, swimming picnics, badminton, volley ball, visits to major league ball games and various other games.

Watergate Crowd Hears Robeson Sing

Allard de Ridder conducts the National Symphony Orchestra in the sixth summer concert at the Potomac Watergate on Friday night. Soloist: Paul Robeson with Lawrence Brown at the piano. Program: Overture to "Semiramide" (Rossini), Symphony No. 8 in F major (Beethoven), Sketch for Two Solo Instruments (De Ridder), Le Caarneval Romain (Berlioz), Pas d'Action from "Scenes de Ballet" (Glazunov), Wedding March (Mendelssohn), Songs by Mendelssohn, Beethoven, Garat, Quilter and Musorgski, and folk songs.

By Ray C. B. Brown

Washingtonians paid Paul Robeson the compliment of crowding the Potomac Watergate to capacity last evening when he sang at the eighty-seventh "Sunset Symphony" concert at which Allard de Ridder made his first local appearance as guest conductor. While he was officially billed as soloist with the orchestra, the great baritone relied only upon his faithful accompanist, Lawrence Brown, and gave a miniature recital which was enjoyed as much by the musicians behind him on the stage as by the thousands of auditors before him. Four songs in each half of the program constituted his allotment, but that was extended by exactly the same number of encores.

BROWN

Robeson is one of the most admirable singers of his generation, for his fine vocal endowment is invariably used with artistry and infallible musical instinct. The richness of his voice is such that he could have swayed his listeners without the amplification that swelled its volume, and the clarity of his enunciation would have carried his words to the outer verge of the crowd. It was a stirring experience to hear his delivery of "Lord God of Abraham" from Mendelssohn's "Elijah," and his reading of Beethoven's "Creation's Hymn" informed that song with the dignity and the devotional fervor which it often fails to receive.

Evidence of Robeson's research in lyric literature was offered in "Dans le Printemps de mes Annees" by Pierre Jean Garat, who was noted not as a composer but as the most remarkable male singer of the late eighteenth century and early nineteenth centuries. Garat's voice covered the full tenor and barytone range, and he was unexcelled as an interpreter of roles in Gluck's operas. Robeson also brought forth two of Musorgski's neglected songs, "Within Four Walls" and "Pride" singing the first in English and the second in Russian.

Other programmed songs were Roger Quilter's version of "Over the Mountain" and two spirituals: "Sometimes I Feel Like a Motherless Child" and "Every Time I Feel the Spirit." His encores included "Water Boy," "No, John," the Russian marching song, "From Border to Border;" "The Peat-Bog Soldiers," "Old Man River," a Chinese folk song, the Chinese patriotic song, "Chi Lai," and part of Earl Robinson's "A Ballad for Americans."

Allard de Ridder made a favorable impression as an energetic and stimulating conductor, who led off with the easily spared "Semiramide" overture by Rossini, and then gave a brilliant reading of Beethoven's eighth symphony. In his conducting one felt a strain of naivete running through his obviously scholarly grasp of the work. As a composer, he introduced a romantically tinctured "Sketch for Two Solo Instruments," in which violin and flute simulated nightingales against an orchestral background picturing a moonlit lake.

City News in Brief

A first-degree murder conviction carrying the death penalty was returned yesterday by a District Court jury against George Jones, 45, Negro, of 1429 Columbia Road Northwest, who was charged with shooting to death another Negro, Sterling Williams, 40, of 1425 T Street Northwest, on March 14, 1943, when he got into an argument with him concerning a woman.

Dissolution Asked

District Court was petitioned yesterday to finally dissolve a corporation which, according to its last surviving director, has been virtually dead for 21 years.

Col. Wade H. Cooper of the University Club asked the court to close out the American Sociological Congress, Inc., of the University Club. He stated that the congress, a charitable organization, never made a profit, has no property, no stock, no liabilities or creditors, and further has failed in its purpose since it hasn't had any engagements since 1922.

Sentenced to Prison

Terry F. Betteridge, 22, of Meadowbrook, Md., was sentenced yesterday in District Court by Justice F. Dickinson Letts to serve from 3 to 9 years in prison for housebreaking and larceny and grand larceny, the latter charge in connection with the theft of an automobile. In addition the court sentenced him to serve an additional three years for violation of his parole on a previous conviction.

Bar Recommendations

Four nominations to fill the vacancy in Court of Appeals of the District were recommended by the city chapter of the National Lawyers Guild at its meeting Tuesday, it was announced last night.

They are Charles Fahy, Solicitor General of United States; William H. Hastie, former judge of United States District Court of Virgin Islands; Lloyd K. Garrison, general counsel of WLB, and Bolitha Laws, judge of United States District Court.

8 Drivers Are 'Fined' Gas Tickets

Nine Other Cases Dismissed; More Hearings Planned By OPA Panel

Eight pleasure drivers last night were penalized from one to six coupons each from their gas ration books in the second session of the District OPA special panel in the Force School building, 1740 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest.

Five charged with pleasure driving failed to show up, nine cases were dismissed and two continued until next Thursday night when another hearing will be held.

Frederich Stohlman, chairman of the three-man board, said it had been tentatively planned to hold the hearings Thursdays and Fridays of each week until the cases are cleared up.

John Spratt, 55 Bryant Street Northwest, forfeited six C coupons and Donald G. Burke, 226-A Bates Street Northwest, and Herman Brooks, 1114 H Street Northwest, were assessed one A coupon each and one week of Cs.

One A and One B

Because he took his girl friend to a high school prom, Luigi A. Vagnoni, youthful Navy Yard employe was forced to turn in one A coupon and one B.

George V. Kissel, 1239 Holbrook Terrace Northeast forfeited an A coupon for using his automobile to go to a gambling establishment, where he said he dropped $40.

An OPA investigator secured his license number while he was in the resort, mailed him a notice to appear before the panel on a pleasure driving charge, and testified against him before the panel.

"That's the way it was, Sir," Kissel, good natured employe of a bakery, admitted to the panel chairman, "but what you're going to do to me is not going to be near as bad as I caught from my wife when she saw and read that notice you sent me. . . ."

Hearings Continued

Harry Cayton, 2948 Macomb Street Northwest; Elfrida J. Dyaart, 4801 Connecticut Avenue Northwest; Withers Tolliver, 49 De Frees Street Northwest; Robert C. McGinnis, 2001 O Street Northwest and James Anderson, 216 G Street Northeast, all failed to show up.

They will be notified again to appear, according to John Laskey, chief attorney for the District of Columbia.

Price Checkers Ready

Fifteen women who are to be the captains over a group of 400 selected to check OPA food prices in 1800 stores in the District met with Sherwood Dodge, local OPA official, in the Chamber of Commerce Building at 8 p. m. yesterday.

Armed with blanks and posters, these women will set out on Monday to visit the food stores, each calling on about five stores, helping the merchant to check certain foods according to brands, styles or grades, size or weight with the posted price, and ceiling price.

Mrs. John Graham, jr., of OPA, was at the meeting to assist Dodge in instructing the captains as to training their lieutenants. OPA hopes to interest women in discouraging violations through interest in their own food problems, putting price control on a neighborhood basis, it was said.

Those named captains were:

Mrs. Anna Warner, Mrs. Anita Sufrin, Mrs. E. B. Lisemby, Mrs. Joseph Coppock, Mrs. Harry Shapiro, Mrs. Thomas H. Whitcroft, Mrs. Charles Sklar, Mrs. Irwin Geiger, Mrs. W. A. Sellers, Mrs. Walter White, Mrs. Adelaide Grant, Mrs. Charles Duke, Miss M. E. Ropke, Mrs. Abbie Beall, Mrs. Robert Marshall.

Addition Joins Black Rail Family at Zoo

The latest development in the Washington Zoo colony is the addition of one unit to the black rail family, it was brought to light yesterday during a tour of the Zoo grounds.

Since black rails, and most other rails for that matter, are shy and unsociable birds around the birth period, it is quite likely that the new addition had been hiding out and is several days old. Like all other black rails it is black and has a chartreuse beak; and is the fifth of its kind staying here. Black rails, cousins to Virginia rails, originally hailed from the area just south of the Sahara Desert, and are known to some as Limnocorax Flaverostra.

It was also learned that the baby duiker, born March 23, is a male, and seems pretty satisfied with things in general.

None of the animals or birds are particularly disturbed by the heat, polar bears and penguins included.

Full-Fashioned

By Jeanne Contini

Half size is sometimes mistakingly confused with half chic. Our feeling in these rationed times (and we are certain that many gentlemen will agree) is that the sight of a fine full-blown figure is all too rare.

With that in mind we spotted this sheer faconne . . . as charming and timely a dress as you could want. The softly shirred bodice is shapely and the multigored skirt fashioned for gracious walking and sitting. One of the prime secrets of making the most of a generous form is to avoid having your clothes either adhere like paper on the wall or hang in tent-like folds. Buy them large enough to be loosely molded to your figure. Just as a reminder, faconne is a cool, semi-opaque fabric with a shadowy delicate floral pattern. White, beige, rose, or blue . . . and particularly elegant with a biggish black straw hat, black gloves, and pearls. In half sizes . . . About $10.

Your Figure, Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain

You lean girls get leaner in the summer and blame the whole thing on the weather. And what with rationing and all, you may feel pretty sorry for yourself.

Well, you can pick up 10 pounds if you go about it right. Most of you eat too little purely from habit and in the summer you have even less interest in food. You try to string along on sandwiches and cool beverages and it's no wonder you feel as limp as wilted lettuce.

Start this summer right so that you won't have to drag through the days with your energy at low ebb. You can gain a pound a week by seeing to it that you get an extra 500 calories a day. That isn't difficult. Milk, for example. How much do you drink? Probably one glass a day is your average. But don't call it a day until you have had a full quart of milk. Plus two eggs. When you have been undernourished for some time, you need a good quality of protein and adequate minerals to build up, and milk and eggs fill the bill best. So, before milk goes on the rationed list, get your four glasses a day—675 calories. The eggs give you 150 calories and furnish protein, extra iron and vitamin A, all of which you need.

If you really want to improve your health you will eat breakfast. You are so positive you couldn't eat a good morning meal that you don't try. But work up to it gradually. Tomorrow morning have fruit juice, a serving of cereal and a slice of toast. If you add fresh berries to the cereal you will like it better. The next morning add a second slice of toast, and the third morning include a poached egg. The cereal is important because it supplies vitamin B. For extra amounts of this vitamin, mix in a little wheat germ. And to keep from getting tired of cereal, have it hot one morning and cold the next. Make a point of always having fruit, the hot or cold cereal, an egg, toast and beverage in the morning.

If you prefer sandwiches for lunch, all right. But have milk, not iced tea. And top off with some dessert like custard pudding with crushed strawberries, or ice cream, or rice pudding with raisins.

At dinner, be sure to have vegetables, which are not fattening, but which do have a bearing on assimilation—and it's only what you assimilate that counts—and meat, fish or fowl.

You need some in-between-meal calories, but be careful to take them when they will not dull your appetite for the next meal. Usually from 3:30 to 4 o'clock is a good time. Have an eggnog then—you will be surprised how it will pick you up. And get in your fourth glass of milk before retiring. Take it warm and add one of the malt beverages. It will lull you to sleep. And, speaking of sleep, you thin girls need nine hours. Sleep gives your body a chance to mend the wornout tissues and build new ones, so avoid overstimulation before bedtime and try to get in a rest-and-relax period sometime during the day to prevent overfatigue. If you rest before you are tired, you can keep from getting tense.

Don't let Hollywood fool you into thinking you can be streamlined right down to your collarbones and still have curves in the right places. When you see a movie heroine who is as thin as tissue paper but has fashionably curved bosom, you can almost take it for granted that it is custom made and built right into her gown.

But you want a well-developed chest with dimples instead of "salt cellars" at the base of your throat—in other words, health, for when you lump oomph, curves and glamour together, they come out health.

You'd better go about building up, because you can't have curves until you do. Your weight is a factor in your health and the bust measurement is greatly influenced by your weight. The addition of 5 to 10 pounds with improved muscle tone will make a marked difference in your health and figure.

You need good food three meals a day with a full quart of milk. Your disinterest in food is the chief reason you cannot gain. But food is only one factor. You also need to relax. Get in an occasional sun bath. That's a good way of taking the kinks out of your muscles. Of course, you must realize you can't get your suntan all in one sitting. Just 15 minutes in the sun between the hours of 11 and 3 will be plenty for a starter. Besides helping you to relax, the sun lets you build up your storage of vitamin D.

There are three sports that might have been invented expressly for you underweights—archery, rowing and swimming. Any one of them will do things for you. One thin girl who took up archery added 3 inches to her bust measurement. And you never see a flat-chested swimmer.

Sports may be out of the question, but you can pattern your exercises along the lines of that same trio.

Do the backstroke and breast stroke. Stand erect, your stomach muscles pulled up and in, and work your arms from the shoulders just as if you were swimming. Try to put as much action into it as though you were cutting through the water.

To stimulate rowing, sit on the floor, observe the same rules for stomach muscles, and do forward bending and circling of the trunk.

Sturdy Sandwich Trio

The sandwich is in its heyday for it is truly going places—to offices, wartime classes, picnics, on trains and buses and neighborhood canning bees.

Are you one of those persons who feels "all washed up and dragged out" at the end of the day's work? Are you nervous, irritable and exhausted as the hour for going home gets around?

Perhaps it is because you do not eat a nutritious lunch. One properly balanced meal a day will not keep a person supplied with vim and vigor. Lunch is just as important as breakfast or dinner. It comes right in the middle of the working hours when you are burning up lots of energy.

If you are among the many who must carry your lunch to work because food is not accessible or restaurant lines are too long for you to wait to be served, then pack a well-balanced nourishing lunch.

Those persons who have analyzed the cause of accidents at work have agreed that one of the chief causes of these accidents is fatigue. Workers are apt to be careless when tired. And a great deal of the fatigue is caused by incorrect eating.

So if you pack your own lunch or pack for a worker, remember that the lunch box must hold food that gives the pick-up needed at midday.

What is a good lunch? A good lunch must nourish—it has a big job to do. A good lunch must taste good, or it may not be eaten. A good lunch must carry well, or it will be unappetizing.

Here are several suggestions for lunches which will give adequate nutrition to either man or woman:

Lunch Menu

Flaked Fish Sandwich on Enriched White Bread
Pimiento Sandwich Spread on Rye Bread
Carrot Strips—Pickles
Peach Honey Cookies
Milk or Coffee

Flaked Fish Sandwich—Mix well in a bowl the following ingredients: Flaked or cooked fish, 1 tablespoon chopped celery, 1 tablespoon sweet pickles, 3 tablespoons mayonnaise, 1 tablespoon catsup, 1 tablespoon horseradish, ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon pepper. This amount will make two large sandwiches.

Lunch Menu

Deviled Egg Sandwich
Pickled Beets Olives
Apple Brownies
Milk or Coffee

Bean and Frankfurt Sandwich

On a slice of buttered bread put ¼ cup shredded cabbage. Add 2 tablespoons baked beans and top with a few slices of frankfurter, browned in a bit of hot fat. Top with slice of buttered bread.

SALAMI AND CARROT SANDWICH

Tear salami into small pieces. Mix together grated carrot, pickle and mayonnaise. Spread on bread. Lay pieces of salami on top. If the sandwich is to be eaten soon, top with a piece of lettuce. Otherwise wrap lettuce in separate piece of waxed paper to be put into sandwich just before eating.

Women's Council Hears Report on War

By Genevieve Reynolds

"This war is not won yet. There are still months and even years ahead in sacrifices. We haven't cracked the enemies' citadel. We are just getting into position to attack," warned Lieut. Gen. Brehon Somervell, commanding general, Army Service Forces, speaking before the Women's National Advisory Council of the women's interest section, War Department, Bureau of Public Relations, at a luncheon meeting yesterday in the Mayflower Hotel.

GENEVIEVE REYNOLDS

"There is a dangerous tendency throughout the Nation to look on this war as practically won," he asserted. "On every side evidence of this belief is apparent. A slacking off of effort and dissension rising from the scuffle to grab a soft seat in the bus back to peaceful prosperity is one of the greatest dangers we have ever faced."

He challenged the women to use their influence on the grumblers, the chiselers and the cheaters who selfishly undermine the efforts to gear this Nation to a total war and that it should be used every hour of every day.

Declaring that our Army is the best fed and best clothed in the history of the world, Lieut. Gen. Somervell asked his women listeners to counteract the grumblings and misstatements of Mrs. Blank, who beefs that she can't get the choicest cut of steak and maintains that the Army has been rotting around in warehouses. "The boys have a terrific job to do and need the best food," he said. "When I was in Africa I heard a lot about Spam—it's getting to be as monotonous as was a can of salmon to the soldiers in World War I."

Appealing to the women listeners—presidents and representatives of outstanding organizations here—to help keep up the morale of the soldiers, he defined morale as a soldier's attitude toward the job he has to do. And it can be only good or bad. Therefore, he urged women to be careful about the type of letters they write to their sons, brothers or sweethearts. For when the soldier is worried about his womenfolk's welfare, he's not too happy about facing firing guns.

Paying high tribute to the WAACS(Lieutenant General Somervell said: "I predict that they will win the deserved recognition as a great contribution to our country. From a modest beginning shortly over a year ago they have grown to a corps 65,000 strong. The Army is asking you individually and collectively today to do everything in your power to help them grow to their allotted strength of 150,000 and then to multiply that over and over again.

"When the WAACS came into being they asked to serve as motor car drivers, secretaries, telephone operators, cooks and bakers. That is all. Simple jobs they knew they could do as well as men. Through their efficiency, their proved capabilities, they have been pushed by their own sheer competence into more than 140 different Army occupations. There is no evidence that they have any intention of being stopped. This means that 65,000 combat troops have been released by these WAACS—more than four full divisions can carry our fight to the Axis."

"No web of lies spread by the crafty, salacious tools of our enemies will ever again be given a moment's credence," averred the general. He was referring directly to the WAACS.

Mrs. Emily Newell Blair, chief of the Women's Interests Section, War Department of Public Relations, presided at the luncheon. Distinguished guests included Col. Florence A. Blanchfield, superintendent, Army Nurses Corps; Col. Ovetta Culp Hobby, director of the WAACS; Maj. Emma E. Vogel, director of Physical Therapy Aides, Office of the Surgeon General; Maj. Helen C. Burns, director of Hospital Dietitians, Office of the Surgeon General; Maj. Margaret D. Craighall, Preventive Medicine Division, Office of the Surgeon General; Miss Mary U. Barber, food consultant to the Secretary of War; Mrs. Warwick B. Hobart, adviser on the employment of women to the director of Civilian Personnel and Training, War Department.

Women's Club News

Our present food difficulties are in large part a product of the fact that in peacetime neither the world nor even the United States has been set up so as to feed its people properly. Wartime needs could be met much more readily if peacetime needs were met. So declared Paul H. Appleby, Undersecretary of Agriculture.

Speaking before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club at a dinner meeting Thursday night he quoted Dr. Tom Spies of Birmingham, Ala., as one of the world's great authorities on nutrition as saying "There is no such thing as human 'trash.' Malnutrition is one of the two basic factors in contrbuting to unsuccessful living."

"We can well couple with his conclusion that of the modern psychologists, that with few exceptions which may be regarded rather as accidents," continued Mr. Appleby, "all babies are 'normal,' full of normal potentialities."

Only ignorance or hypocrisy assumes equality of opportunity among people, when only a minority is decently nourished, according to the speaker. He pointed out that the second basic fact proclaimed by the Food Conference is "we know how to produce enough to look confidently toward the day when everyone can be well fed."

The Undersecretary of Agriculture went on to point out the common-sense reasons for feeding the European continent. He said that Germany has made a war profit from all the conquered territories and that if we are to turn production and energies to our aid in those areas we shall have to keep the economies. Then, too, the number of casualties we shall have and the length of the war will be definitely affected by our ability to get in civilian supplies.

THE GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay

The Black Squirrel

WHEN I first saw him he was sitting on his haunches, wistfully watching some gray squirrels chasing each other around and up trees. It was in one of those small, triangular parks off upper Massachusetts Avenue, where the sturdy pin oaks and their large acorns and heavy, deep foliage provide a squirrel's heaven.

This was the blackest squirrel I had ever seen, a dull, dusty black with no alleviating whiteness on the underbody. He—I assumed the sex from the general appearance as well as my own clairvoyance—was one of those freaks of nature in coloring that occasionally occur in the squirrel as well as other families. However, he was not aware that he was different. And he was young and lusty, and full of play, and eager for the companionship of his kind.

For a long time he sat alone on the grass far back from the frisking gray squirrels. Did I only imagine that wistfulness in his small bright eyes? Was I just being sentimental? . . . No, for there he was down on all fours advancing by timid little leaps toward his frolicsome companions.

He was almost in their midst before the gray squirrels were aware. Then one saw him and barked threateningly. The others joined in with chattering curses. Then, ganging up on him, they chased him back to the far corner of the park where he vanished up a tree.

Several other persons had joined me in watching. A woman voiced her indignation. An elderly man shook his head sadly, hopelessly without comment and moved on.

I WAS IN a fury over the behavior of the gray squirrels. I would show them! I would do something! So a few days later I returned—with a bag of peanuts. After all, the taste of a crisp, savory nut might compensate . . . a little . . . for loneliness.

There he was, this time trying to play by himself, alone in his corner of the park far from the other squirrels. He would run and leap as if he were chasing an imaginary playmate, then turn suddenly as if pursued and streak upward around the dark-furrowed bark of an oak tree.

I cautiously approached and began to throw peanuts. He came after them with a singular lack of timidity. Ah, other humans no doubt had also tried to compensate him for his outcast existence! He ate nervously, constantly looking behind him. Then suddenly he was gone! Two gray squirrels were approaching.

My companion and I chased them away, bitterly hurling at them the names of all our favorite enemies. Then we coaxed the black squirrel back and one of us fed him while the other kept at bay his tormentors.

I did not see him for several days, but I could not get him off my mind. His wistfulness, his loneliness, his eager, shy friendliness haunted me. The action of the other squirrels bore heavily upon my spirit . . . Oh well, what was the use? . . .

ONE day I walked past his park. No sign of him. Other persons interested in him had also found him missing. Could those gray gangsters have done something? Could he have lost hope and fled to the forest to become an embittered hermit?

But the next day I saw him. It was in a small park across the street from his original home. He was leaping about in the grass hunting last year's acorns. And—close by was another squirrel, a gray one! The two stayed together as they went from one part of the park to another, seemed to be happily companionable. Into my heart came a great feeling of relief. Perhaps another lonely squirrel, I thought . . . some wallflower . . . or some social nobody . . . or one a little odd and unconventional. I looked closely at the gray squirrel. Was I just imagining things . . . or did its build, its grace, the fineness of its fur, in fact everything about it, to say nothing of my own clairvoyance, indicate that it was a "she?"

Your Baby and Mine

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Children love to run away from us. It is one of the first games a baby learns. When a mother runs haltingly, so as not to catch him, and then gives him a good hug when she ends the chase, he thinks it's fine sport.

Sometimes, when the mother wants to dress him this chasing business—all over the room—gets to be considerably less than joyous, as it does, also, when she wants him to come in the house and he runs like a rabbit in the opposite direction.

Telling the child to "Come here!" even with iron in the mother's tone, sends him running the harder, wanting to be chased and caught. He loves it. Mother doesn't.

When the child must be dressed, pick him up bodily and lift him to some high place (the top of the toilet stool is a convenient one) and he'll stay put until he is dressed. It's easier to get socks and shoes on if he is placed in his toidy chair, and this is the natural place for him when he wakes up or after his nap. Then he can't wriggle all over the bed or strain to get off the mother's lap and add immeasurably to the difficulty of putting those limp feet into shoes.

At 3 or more, when he can climb from a high place independently, we have to use other tactics. He has to cooperate or we are helpless. Most children will, and easily, if the mother learns the value of apparent compliance to his desires.

Miss Betty kept clapping her feet together saying coyly, "I won't let you put on my shoes. I won't, I won't." After it became plain she would not, her mother walked out of the door, saying pleasantly, When you get "ready to be dressed, call me." The screams for help began before she had taken 10 steps.

Children love to be chased, and just as ardently do they hate being turned away from. If they won't get dressed or won't come when called, (this is for little folks) turn away yourself. Walk out and close a door, or go into your own room and watch them come flying.

It is one thing to be master of a situation which has the parent on the run; it's quite another to have mother's back turned on you. When the parent ceases to struggle with the child—to get things done—the child will do them.

Beryl Hope Brand, Mollie Segal Among This Week's Brides

War Department Employe Is Married in Salt Lake City

Brides of this week include Miss Beryl Hope Brand of Washington, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo Dow Brand of Chicago, Ill., and Miss Mollie Segal, daughter of Morris Segal, also of this city.

Miss Brand's marriage to Harold Valentine Walther took place Wednesday in Salt Lake City, Utah. For the ceremony, the bride wore a white satin bridal gown made with fitted bodice, sweetheart neckline, full skirt and short train. Her veil was finger-tip length. Miss Phebe Robinson of Providence, Utah, now with the Navy Department here, was the bride's only attendant.

The bride is connected with the War Department. She was graduated from the University of Chicago and did graduate study there.

Following a brief stay in Salt Lake City the couple went to Nevada to see the parents of the bridegroom, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Crawford, and to visit the bridegroom's ranch, where they will make their home after the war. Upon their return from the West they will visit the bride's parents in Chicago, where a wedding reception will be held and will continue to Rhode Island, where the bridegroom is stationed.

Merelman—Segal

Miss Segal was married here Thursday to Bernard S. Merelman, son of I. Merelman of Chicago, Ill., and the late Mrs. Merelman. Rabbi S. H. Metz and Cantor L. Novick officiated at the ceremony.

After a wedding trip to New York, the couple will make their home here.

Sulgrave Dances For Officers to Recess for Summer

No more Midweek Officers' Dances at the Sulgrave Club until Thursday, September 23. Miss Emily French Myers, chairman of the committee sponsoring these popular dances for young officers on duty in the Capital, announces that the series will recess during July and August.

The last dance, held Thursday evening, was one of the most successful arranged by the committee. Mrs. Kenneth Watson received with Miss Jane Culbertson, Miss Mary Lord Andrews, Miss Patricia Prochnik, Miss Catherine Hambley, Miss Mary Matthews and Miss Achsah Dorsey.

A decided hit on the hot night were the tables set out in the garden where refreshments were served. But as always, on the stroke of 12, the officers and girls went their way, for war jobs start early in the morning.

Out of My Mind

By Katharine Brush

Servicemen Only

A homesick American soldier who has been in Australia for more than a year has sent me the following little list called "Things I Like About New York" . . .

"The size of it. The roar it makes. The special deep blue of the witlights. The daily blaze of the sunset at the western ends of the crosstown streets. The buildings of the Cornell Medical Center. The immense globe of the world revolving slowly in its sunken pit on the first floor of the Daily News Building. The stork on the Stork Club's matchfolders, with the opera hat on and the monocle in his eye.

"Hildegarde singing 'Jenny.' The ship-model room at the New York Yacht Club. Carmen Miranda's turbans, and her gold skirt scalloping her hips, and the gestures she makes with her hands to put a song over. The flaming shaslik on spears in the Russian restaurants. The bronze Buddha at the entrance to India House, that you rub for luck. The juvenile high chairs for adults at Hamburger Heaven. Dwight Fiske's famous leer. Emil Coleman's hunching shoulders over a keyboard, and his smile of greeting. The undefinable mauve-decade odor of the Metropolitan Opera House.

"The Rockefeller Plaza Ice Rink, and the wailing of the wind around the towers of skyscrapers. The red hair of the checkroom girl who knows everybody at Sardi's. The bars that look like ships' smoking rooms—the King Cole Bar at the St. Regis, for example, and the back room at the Plaza. The inscription across the top of the postoffice building, which everybody likes, but nobody ever quite quotes correctly. The tooting of tugs on the river. The summer roofs. The wonderful girls" . . .

The boy was an Army air cadet in the primary stage of his pilot training, and he had that look they almost all have—fresh-face sunburned, stalwart, rather handsome, and incredibly young. He was wearing the brown flying-coveralls they all wear in the planes, with the strapped-in ankles, and the pocket (for maps) below the knee, on the trouser leg. The primary cadets wear their names on these coveralls, inked onto a tape sewed over the breast pocket; and his name was R. H. Jones or J. P. Doe or something. It doesn't matter. They pointed him out to me because—although accidents are amazingly few and rare at those training fields—he had had a recent accident, that boy.

They told me about it. He was flying solo, and he'd had engine trouble somewhere, and had had to bail out. (It was only the ninth or tenth solo flight he'd ever made, incidentally.) When he didn't return to the field on schedule, they sent all the training planes up to look for him, and one of them spotted his plane in a swamp eventually, and later they found his parachute, but there was no sign of the boy himself—not there or anywhere. Nor did he communicate with the field, as of course they're supposed to do if they're able, so that the general alarm grew apace and searching parties were out beating the countryside all night . . .

At 10 o'clock the next morning, however, the boy came trudging in. He had landed safely, but found himself completely lost, so that he had walked until he was tired, and then he'd decided that to get a good night's sleep would be more sensible—so he had lain down in a field and slept serenely for 9 hours. "I really overslept, I guess," he said apologetically, when he got back. He was all right, and not even scratched, and his comrades in the squadron rigged up a sign which they stuck on the back of his flying coveralls. I saw the sign, and it said: "Disappointed undertaker" . . .

When you first go to work at a canteen, you do quite a little boasting about it—well, no, maybe not exactly boasting; but you do mention it pretty presistently to your friends and acquaintances. It's as though you felt that those few hours a week constituted quite a sacrifice on your part; really quite a big patriotic gesture.

But the funny thing is that the longer and harder you work at the job, the humbler and quieter you get about it. The boys themselves do this to you. They make so little fuss about their own tremendous contribution—you can't be proud of your tiny one. You wind up in the end being ashamed that it is so small, and so inadequate.

Not that the boys themselves deliberately give you that feeling—it's not that at all. On the contrary. Only the other evening, for instance, a soldier at the canteen where I do a feeble weekly stint was sympathizing with me—and with all of us—saying, "Gee, you people work hard in here." (He meant it too; this wasn't irony.) And he said to me. "How long have you been on duty tonight?" and I told him, and he remarked that the floors were cement, and he added compassionately, "Don't your feet hurt?" I shook my head as emphatically as possible, but I couldn't speak—and neither could you have, if you'd been there.

The boy who was so sorry for me had lost an arm in North Africa.

Daughter of Rep. Bates to Be Wed Today

A change of orders is no respector of brides' plans, so the beautiful garden wedding planned for July by Miss Salona Becky Bates, daughter of the Representative from Kentucky and Mrs. Joe B. Bates, had to be simplified of necessity—and moved up by a few weeks to fit in with the bridegroom's change of station.

So this evening at 7 o'clock in the gardens of White Oak Crossing, suburban home of the Bates' at Greenup, Ky., the wedding of Miss Bates to Ensign Shannon Vinson, U. S. N. R., will take place. The Rev. A. M. Peters of Ashland, Ky., friend of the Bates family, will officiate at the double-ring ceremony, at which only members of the family and a few intimate friends will be present.

The bride-elect will wear a gown of white organza and lace, with tight-fitting basque waist, sweetheart neckline and long train. Her finger-tip-length veil will fall from a coronet of seed pearls and her bouquet will be of gardenias and lilies of the valley. Mrs. Ethel Glenn will be matron of honor.

The bridegroom-elect, son of Mrs. Gypsy Vinson of Louisa, Ky., and the late Mr. Vinson, and cousin of Judge Fred M. Vinson, Director of the Office of Economic Stabilization, will have as his best man, Walter E. Mobley of Sandy Hook, Ky., and Washington. A reception will follow the ceremony, after which the couple will go to Davisville, R. I., where Ensign Vinson will be stationed.

The bride-elect attended Ward-Belmont College in Nashville, Tenn., and was graduated from the College of William and Mary in 1940. Since her graduation she has been librarian of the Thomas Jefferson School in Arlington. The bridegroom-elect attended Centre College in Danville, Ky., and was graduated from the Georgetown University School of Law here.

War of Wits on Desert Occupies Earle Screen

'Five Graves to Cairo' Is Well Acted By Tone, Baxter and an Able Cast; Jimmy Scribner Headlines Stage Bill

"FIVE GRAVES TO CAIRO." Paramount picturization of a screenplay by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, based on a drama by Lajos Biro, costarring Franchot Tone and Anne Baxter, with Akim Tamiroff, Fortunio Bonanova, Peter Van Eyck, Erich von Stroheim, Konstantin Shayne, Fred Nurney, Miles Mander, Ian Keith and Leslie Denison. Directed by Billy Wilder. At the Earle Theater.

AN ADROIT MIXTURE of familiar ingredients has been stirred into an interesting, if not too exciting, sidelight on the early North African campaign in "Five Graves to Cairo," the new screen feature at the Earle Theater.

Devoted to the conflict of individual interests among a small group of "little people" and the Nazi high command, headed by Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, in a desolate little desert inn, the picture goes in for a nice war of wits rather than the thunder of the battlefronts. The stakes in the game are high. Rommel has penetrated into Egypt and feels that the Suez Canal is already within his grasp—or will be in six days. A desperate British corporal, who arrives at the inn one step ahead of the German staff and masquerades as a waiter who had lost his life only a short time before, and a group of captured English officers entertain not too nebulous notions that something might be done about Marshal Rommel. What is, and how, comprises the crux of the story.

There is, of course, the resentful French maid, whose brother was left by the English to perish at Dunkirk, to threaten exposure of Corporal Bramble at the turn of every opportune moment, and there is, too, the terrified native innkeeper to add to the uncertainties of the corporal's enterprises, which in combination add up to a considerable measure of suspense. The drama, however, is rather one of placidity than action, which well might have done more than it has with the implications of its title.

The five "graves" are caches of supplies and munitions planted by Rommel for future reference during an "archeological expedition" in Egypt two years before the beginning of the war. One of his major boasts is of the thoroughness of German preparation and the stupidity of the English. As soon as Corporal Bramble has solved his secret, Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, the authors, have been content to let the matter drop.

Thus it is that "Five Graves to Cairo" centers its interest not so much in the major strategy of the African campaign as in the behavior of Mouche, the chambermaid, and what she is going to do about her antipathy for the British, as principally personified by the corporal. What she does about it, after having been made the victim of a fine display of Nazi duplicity, is to make a bit of heroine of herself by sacrificing her life to the success of the English plan to unseat the Rommel arrogance. The manner in which this comes about is as near a climax as the play possesses.

A Group of Excellent Performances

There is little enough about which to carp in the matter of the performances accorded the leading roles. Anne Baxter, as Mouche, gives further evidence that she is among the most rapidly rising of the younger actresses. Assuming a neat and unexaggerated accent, she quite holds her own in the face of the keen competition offered her by Franchot Tone, as Bramble; Akim Tamiroff, as Farid, the bewildered boniface, and Erich von Stroheim, as Rommel.

Tone's portrayal is on the side of quiet strength and Tamiroff's a deft blending of fear and effective comedy. To the character of Rommel, Erich von Stroheim brings many sturdy qualities, along with a vast vanity and, by the most subtle implication, a bit of ridicule. At luncheon, he gives the captured British officers a lecture on strategy and scoffs at their inability to penetrate the secret of his five "graves." For the maid, he has only scorn and for his lieutenant, who is attracted to her, contempt. Among his British "guests," Miles Mander is made to look inexplicably like Gen. Sir Bernard L. Montgomery. The film's running touch of comedy is skillfully supplied by Fortunio Bonanova, as the operatic Italian general constantly humiliated by the exquisite indifference of his Nazi allies.

Peter Van Eyck, the young Nazi lieutenant; Ian Keith, as Captain St. Bride, Fred Nurney and Leslie Denison make up competent support.

The new stage bill at the Earle, is liveliest and most engaging when given over to the Roxyettes in two striking routines, in one of which, the "Summer Belles" number, they shake a tune or two out of their wristlets and anklets of sleighbells. The headliner for the week is Jimmy Scribner, borrowed from the airwaves, whose vocal acrobatics make it possible for him to present a humorous closeup of the roomful of Southern characters known as "The Johnson Family." Acrobatics of the physical sort are supplied by Jean, Jack and Judy, two remarkably agile girls and an athletic boy.

The ubiquitous "Men Working Together," tracing the close alliance between the armed and industrial forces; a comprehensive newsreel, with its survey of the wreck of Pantelleria, and "Jack Wabbit and the Beanstalk," a slightly far-fetched Merrie Melodie cartoon comedy, are the screen auxiliaries of a solidly fashioned feature.

In the Thick of the Desert Espionage

ANNE BAXTER AND AKIM TAMIROFF, as the "chambermaid" and proprietor of the North African inn that houses the clashing interests involved in Paramount's production of "Five Graves to Cairo," now on the screen at the Earle Theater. Franchot Tone, as a British agent, and Erich von Stroheim, as Field Marshal Erwin Rommel, are other stellar members of the cast.

'Tarzan Triumphs' Over Nazis In New Film on Met. Screen

By Marjorie Kelly

"TARZAN TRIUMPHS." RKO-Radio picturization of a screenplay by Roy Chanslor and Carroll Young, starring Johnny Weissmuller, with Frances Gifford, Johnny Sheffield, the Chimpanzee, Stanley Ridges, Sig Ruman, Rex Williams, Pedro de Cordoba, Philip van Zandt and Stanley Brown. Directed by William Thiele. At the Metropolitan Theater.

It was inevitable that the most picturesque isolationist in the folklore of our time should sooner or later be persuaded, on the screen, to abandon the error of his ways. The film which turns the trick opened at the Metropolitan yesterday.

As we are reminded in "Tarzan Triumphs," the political philosophy of the lord of the jungle has always been a so simple one. It consists of a lordly condescension toward civilization, and a perfect willingness to let anyone alone who will let him alone. He has never had any ambition to save the world; rather, he would live at peace in his jungle fastness, and let the rest of the world go its turbulent, quarrelsome way.

Come the Nazis

But, as isolationists generally have of late years, he runs into trouble with his heretofore successful formula.

The trouble begins when a group of Nazis invade a peaceful neighboring village and set all the natives to work producing war materials for them. Number one Nazi of the group takes a fancy to the jungle maiden Zandra, played by Frances Gifford, but she escapes him and takes refuge with Tarzan, who advises her not to return to her village until the Nazis have gone.

Zandra is a bright girl, though, and she has grasped a fundamental fact about Nazis with a speed which seems phenomenal in comparison with other performances we can think of in the current scene. She tells Tarzan that it won't do to stay away; that none of them will have peace until the Nazis are driven away.

Tarzan Gets Tough

To which Tarzan's answer is a grunted "No." The Nazis haven't hurt him, Zandra is safe with him and Boy, and he wants no trouble with anybody. It takes much exercise of feminine wiles on Zandra's part and much monkey-business from the Nazis before Tarzan is aroused to tangle with them. But like most peaceable souls, though slow to wrath, he is mighty when aroused, and not a Nazi in the group but is plenty sorry he ever bothered the apeman.

We could have told you long ago that the only thing needed to make the war effort complete was to sic Johnny Weissmuller on the Axis!

A Victory short, "Men Working Together," elaborates the statement "men working together is just another way of saying 'democracy,'" by showing the history of a poster which is seen in war production plants all over the country. Also there is a cinematic "Letter from Ireland," narrating the adventures of a couple of Yanks stationed there, and a Popeye cartoon.

Guest Artiste

MARIANA SARRICA, whose virtuosity at the piano is being featured by Conductor Sam Jack Kaufman this week at Loew's Capitol Theater, as part of the new stage and orchestral bill being presented in conjunction with the second week of Judy Garland in "Presenting Lily Mars."

LEONARD LYONS

Broadway Glossary

New York, June 25.

CHANGE: George Weller, the war correspondent, will arrive in New York shortly. A few years ago, Weller's assignment was Nazi Germany. After a long siege there, he finally managed to leave. He arrived in Switzerland, on the day the schools were closing for the season. The youngsters were celebrating this annual event by parading . . . "What's the first thing which impressed you here?" a Swiss asked him . . . "I saw children marching, and they were out of step," said Weller, "and they were happy."

LEONARD LYONS

DEVICE: One of Milton Berle's friends is a retired vaudevillian who spends all his money betting on the horses. He's a constant loser, despite the number of tip-sheets, touts, fortune-tellers he patronizes. But he's optimistic, and keeps trying new ways of beating the game . . . The retired vaudevillian is hard of hearing, and last week he appeared at the Friars Club wearing an electric hearing device. Joe Frisco saw this, and asked Berle: "Say, what's he got now—a direct wire to Belmont?"

HIDEOUT: John Wildberg, the producer, was host last week to some visiting members of his family. To assure an undisturbed reunion, Wildberg took them to a restaurant in the Village, an out-of-the-way place. When they were seated, Wildberg told the group: "This is a unique place. Nobody ever comes here. It's practically unexplored, as far as New Yorkers are concerned." . . . Then into the room came Eleanor Roosevelt.

RULE: When Lou Maxon, the Detroit advertising man, went to Washington to work for OPA, Bill Jeffers, the rubber administrator, invited him to lunch. They discovered that they liked each other. "I'm going to propose you for membership in our club," said Jeffers. "There are only five members, and we have only one by-law" . . . "Okay. What's the by-law?" Maxon asked . . . "It's that you must agree not to quit here," said Jeffers, "until you're fired."

CHATTER: Tony Martin will go to OCS at the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga. . . . This week's favorite for a Supreme Court appointment from Gov. Dewey is David W. Peck, one of the Governor's friends . . . An unusual settlement has been arranged between Look magazine and three discharged employes. One of the terms provides that both sides shall contribute $25 to the War Chest . . . When "Lady in the Dark" opens in Los Angeles, Danny Kaye, who played in the original company on Broadway, will appear in it for one performance. For that same performance Moss Hart, who wrote and directed the show, will play the doctor's role.

AGE: Patricia Kirkland, daughter of Nancy Carroll and Jack Kirkland, was introduced to Tommy Manville, who said: "I'd marry you if you were 18" . . . "Well, I'm 17," said Patricia . . . "What're you doing on your eighteenth birthday?" asked Manville, hopefully. Patricia said: "Running as fast as I can."

Magician Since Boy

Chester Morris, the star of "Aerial Gunner," is the film colony's ace magician. He has been interested in magic since he was a boy of 12 when he invested his pennies and nickels in magic gadgets and put on shows for the neighborhood children. Since World War II he has entertained thousands of servicemen in camps throughout the Nation.

Hails New Disney Film as Great

Hollywood, Calif., June 25.—As the movie industry is going all out to help raise 40 million dollars for the cruiser Los Angeles—with a campaign starting with a rally in Hollywood Bowl, in which C. B. DeMille will introduce Secretary of Navy Frank Knox and Bing Crosby will headline — I'm hoping the industry will do likewise to help Maj. Alexander P. de Seversky and Walt Disney put over their picture, "Victory Through Air Power," which every man, woman and child in America should see. In the picture you not only have the late Billy Mitchell pleading for air power, but De Seversky asking for big land bombers and a separate commander for the air—just as the Army and Navy have. The film will create much controversy. Many brass hats won't like it. Yet the recent victories in Europe have been won through air power, and Washington has just announced 10 billion dollars is to be spent for more planes. I think "Victory Through Air Power" is one of the most stupendous things we've ever put on the screen.

WALT DISNEY

What Next?

Now that Madeleine Carroll got thousands off her income tax for taking care of French orphans, she and Sterling Hayden want to change their names legally to John and Madeleine Hamilton to avoid embarrassing publicity and requests for autographs and gathering of people wherever Hayden appears. Hi, ho! . . . Young Robert Stanford, former public relations man for General Motors, gets a lead opposite Rita Hayworth in "Cover Girl," and that cute Jeff Donnell is to costar with Kenny Baker in "Doughgirls in Ireland" . . . If the Charles Boyers' child is a boy, they'll name him Michael. If a girl—well, they haven't yet gotten around to that possibility . . . Danny Kaye's Sylvia Fine is wanted by Metro to write the lyrics for Red Skelton's next offering.

Good News

Dane Clark, New York newcomer, is to have the third spot behind Cary Grant and John Garfield in "Destination, Tokyo." When Cary was asked whether he was going to do the picture with Writer Delmar Daves doing his first directorial job, Grant quipped, "Well, they took a chance on me. Why shouldn't I take a chance on him?" . . . Universal may defer the starting date of Deanna Durbin's next picture to allow Akim Tamiroff to attend the premiere of "For Whom the Bells Toll" in New York . . . Elliot Nugent's 15-year-old daughter, Barbara, is remaining in the East to join the youngsters from her school in the United States crop corps working at Newburgh, N. Y. . . . Gol. Sol Rosenblatt of Washington spent his two weeks' furlough here. William Beveridge, on his last remaining day here, made radio recordings of speeches because he couldn't be on time in cities where they wanted him.

Wire and Learn

Ten years ago Eddie Buzzel, while visiting his dentist, patted the latter's 8-year-old daughter on the head and said, "You're so pretty, some day I'll put you in a picture." Now the girl's even prettier; she's graduated from high school, and Eddie has to make good. He says, "Some day I'll learn to keep my big mouth shut."

Capital Store Sales Up 9% During Week

Washington department store sales in the week ended June 19 averaged 9 per cent more than in the same week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported yesterday. The entire Fifth Reserve District showed a sales gain of 18 per cent for the week.

For the four weeks ended June 19 local sales were 16 per cent heavier, while the Fifth District increase was 22 per cent in the same period.

Dun & Bradstreet, Inc., reported yesterday that substitutes and an active consumer demand had offset shortages of merchandise in holding the dollar volume of retail trade well above year-ago levels.

Hot weather merchandise, the mercantile agency's trade review said, found a heavy demand during the past week although summer temperatures brought a slight letup in buying compared with the previous week.

Apparel departments, the review found, continued to dominate retail sales.

Dollar sales on the Pacific Coast and in the Southwest showed the largest increases over 1942 at 28 to 30 and 30 to 34 per cent, respectively. The average gains over a year ago were 14 to 16 per cent. The increase in New England was estimated at 8 to 10 per cent, East 10 to 15 per cent, Middle West 12 to 14 per cent, Northwest 7 to 10 per cent and South 19 to 22 per cent.

Baird Portrait Unveiled

A portrait of Bruce Baird, now completing his third year as president of National Savings & Trust Co., was unveiled yesterday in the presence of officers, directors and employes of that institution at the Statler Hotel. Directors of the company honoring Mr. Baird held a reception preceding the ceremony. A brief address of presentation was made by Col. Walter C. Clephane, dean of the directorate, having been a member of the board since 1907. The portrait, by Bjorn Egeli, was unveiled by Mrs. Bruce Baird.

It will hang in the company's board room with those of past presidents and officials of the bank since its organization in 1867. They are William D. Hoover, present chairman of the board, latest past president, and these deceased executives: H. Prescott Gatley, Thomas R. Jones, Benjamin P. Snyder, Henry A. Willard, William Stickney, Hugh McCullough, first president of the institution, and Woodbury Blair, for many years a vice president. Lewis T. Breuninger was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

Rail Bonds Offered

The largest piece of senior railroad financing in many months came to the market yesterday when Kuhn, Loeb & Co. offered $28,483,000 of 3¾ per cent bonds of the Pennsylvania, Ohio & Detroit Railroad at 101¾.

The bonds were guaranteed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. and offered subject to approval of the Interstate Commerce Commission. Proceeds from the issue will be to redeem an equal amount of outstanding first and refunding 4½ per cent bonds due in 1977 at 102½ and interest.

Properties of the issuing company are leased to the Pennsylvania Railroad for 999 years and form an integral part of the Pennsylvania system in Ohio and Michigan.

Chicago Pit Halts Trading in Corn

Chicago, June 25 (AP).—Directors of the Chicago Board of Trade today ordered settlement of all outstanding contracts in corn and prohibited trading in corn futures "until further notice." The action was taken at the request of the War Food Administration.

Settlement prices will be at Office of Price Administration ceilings, or $1.05 a bushel for July and September deliveries and $1.01 a bushel for the December delivery. Contracts outstanding at the close yesterday totaled 15,698,000 bushels.

Purcell Renamed SEC Chairman

Philadelphia, June 25 (AP).—Ganson Purcell was reelected chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission today for the year ending June 30, 1944.

Purcell, who was appointed to the Office of Economic Stabilization by President Roosevelt last Wednesday, said today the appointment will bring about a closer relationship between the commission and the OES in problems dealing with investments and securities. He added that he will work several days each week with the OES in Washington.

Purcell was appointed to the commission's staff as an attorney in August, 1941, and has served as chairman since January, 1942.
